Magical voice behind 'Andher', Faraz Haider

Makes a comeback after 8 years with a new single 'Doob Gaye'

HS Staff Reporter

KARACHI: Pakistani singer, songwriter, and music composer, Faraz Haider, has released his new music video by the name of 'Doob Gaye' after a hiatus of 8 years. Out now on multiple music platforms, this enchanting music video with its magical melody, coupled with the thrilling presence of actress and model Sabrina Naqvi, warrants his smashing comeback into the Pakistan music scene.

Doob Gaye is a musical composition by Faraz Haider himself, who has also directed and produced the music video. The screenplay, with exceptional cinematography by Imraan Sheraz, showcases the complexities of thin lines between friendship and love in relationships. The song is a story of one-sided love between two best friends and the bond between a pet dog and his human. It beautifully portrays the deep contrast between both the relationships, one between a man and a woman, and the other between a man and his beloved pet, and weaves a bittersweet lesson of destiny's hand, priorities, and compromises.

Faraz Haider's scintillating voice in Doob Gaye produces the sound of a unique fusion of pain and pop, and that's what sets this latest single apart from the rest in the music industry today. Talking about his newest endeavor, Faraz Haider stated, "A lot has changed in the music industry in Pakistan in the past eight years. But our audiences are the same – music savvy, melody-seeking, and so appreciative of our local sound. The journey towards creating Doob Gaye has been inspiring and nerve-wrecking all at the same time. But now we are back, and I look forward to bringing more and more beautiful melodies for our people."

KE removes over 5,000 Illegal Connections

HS Staff Reporter

KARACHI: In furtherance of its commitment to eliminate power theft, K-Electric conducted as many as 762 anti-power theft drives across the city in the first two weeks of August and removed 5,384 illegal kunda connections from its service areas. These kunda-removal drives that took place in different parts of the city, including Surjani, New Karachi, Gulistan-e-Johar, Orangi, Liaquatabad, Nazimabad, Bin Qasim, and Malir, among others, unhooked illegal wires weighing over 5,700 kilograms that were illegally connected to KE's infrastructure and were being used to steal electricity worth millions.

Director Communications and KE's Spokesperson Imran Rana commented on the matter, "K-Electric strongly condemns these miscreants who use illegal connections to energize their premises. Not only they are putting the lives and properties of the masses at peril but also trying to steal the right of our valuable consumers who access the electricity the legal way and pay for it. We continue to conduct these anti-kunda drives every day and remove thousands of illegal connections but unfortunately these are restored within a few hours of removal. However, we would like to assure that we would stop at nothing to crackdown against these culprits. It is to make it loud and clear that K-Electric is dealing such lawbreakers with an iron hand, and any act of stealing electricity can lead to the penalty of PKR 10 million and imprisonment up to 03 years."

The spokesperson further stated, "Power infrastructure carries dangerously high voltage electricity and is installed by trained personnel in compliance with rigorous safety parameters. Any tampering with the network by an unauthorized person can lead up to serious consequences, including fatalities. Kundas also weigh down and damage electrical utility wires, which make them prone to short-circuiting, fire-eruption, and faults in power supply system that cause inconvenience to the consumers."

Heavy floods caused humanitarian disaster: Sherry Rehman

ISLAMABAD: Federal Minister for Climate Change Senator Sherry Rehman, during her remarks in the briefing on current flood emergency in the country by NDMA, stressed the need for immediate humanitarian and rescue efforts to rehabilitate the aggrieved and flood-hit populations.

This was an urgent meeting called to reassess damage done by recurring and unprecedented floods and to apprise development partners and donors of the criticality of the crisis.

Calling attention to the current climate crisis in the country, Minister Rehman said, "Right now we are in 7th spell of a torrential monsoon that has left thousands homeless, 830 dead and 1348 injured. From Balochistan, the monsoon system has moved to Sindh where 30 districts are under water.

The magnitude of it can be assessed from the fact that it has rained more than 395% in Sindh and 379% in Balochistan above the average rainfall. It is a climate catastrophe of epic scale, bringing in its wake the humanitarian crisis that could well match the magnitude of the big flood that was witnessed in 2010. At this point both sides of the Indus are flooded in Sindh which is the current epicentre of the calamity.

Mushaal says denying Yasin right to appearance in court, lying on Mirwais' house arrest shameful

By Staff Reporter

ISLAMABAD: Chairperson of Peace and Culture Organisation (PCO), Mushaal Husseini Mullick lashed out at Hindutva regime for constant denial of the fundamental right to Yasin Malik to appear physically in courts and lying on the house arrest of Mirwais Umar Farooq.

Mushaal, who is wife of Yasin Malik, said in a statement on Tuesday that Narendra Modi-led fascist India was so scared of the Lion of Kashmir so much that he was denied the fundamental right to appear physically in courts.

She stated that Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front Chairman, Muhammad Yasin Malik demanded physical appearance during the hearing in a case registered against him in a Jammu court about the killing four Indian Air Force (IAF) personnel in 1990.

However, she said that coward Indian kangaroo courts refused to entertain his legal, constitutional and fundamental rights, which was shameful and condemnable.

Talking about Hurriyat Leader Mirwais Umer Farooq, Mushaal said that fascist Modi government just got caught lying red handed to the media that the senior Hurriyat Leader was not house arrested and was a free man.

The Chairperson said that what a nasty joke as the media exposed the dirty face of the notorious regime that kept the senior Kashmiri leader in detention.

She went on to say that the Indian brutal forces used all inhuman and fascist acts to silence the dissenting voices.

However, Mushaal made it clear that the Kashmir freedom movement entered into a defining moment, hence nothing could dampen the courage of brave Kashmiris. She said that they would take the freedom struggle to its logical end.

However, she lamented the double-standard of the world and human rights organizations which observed criminal silence over the world's worst human rights violations in the Indian Illegally Occupied Jammu and Kashmir.

17 teachers from Beaconhouse complete Leadership Certificate

By Staff Reporter

ISLAMABAD: Seventeen teachers from Beaconhouse, one of the largest private educational networks in the world educating over 315,000 students, have successfully completed the inaugural International Subject Leadership Certificate by the UK-based Professional Training Institute.

The 18-month accreditation is a modular course that allows participants to work with experienced practitioners to design exceptional lessons. It aims to develop subject leaders through the design and delivery of challenging Schemes of Work (SOW).

Teachers enrolled in the course reflected on the current context of their subject within their school curriculum, considered what makes successful subject leadership, and explored the course success criteria during the online launch meeting. They gathered evidence to help reflect upon and illustrate the impact of their work on pupils, colleagues and themselves. During the course, participants were assessed in peer-to-peer professional interviews during an online review meeting, to discuss and reflect upon the success and impact of their work.

The Professional Training Institute is a UK education charity supporting teachers at all stages of their career to develop specialist subject knowledge. It believes that all children, regardless of their background or ability, are entitled to a rich education delivered by passionate and knowledgeable teachers.

Commenting on the accomplishment, Ali Ahmed Khan, Chief Operating Officer, Beaconhouse said, "This has been a great learning experience for our hardworking teachers. At Beaconhouse, we prioritise teacher training and believe in continuous development that supports them in facilitating effective learning in the classroom. I congratulate all the Beaconhouse teachers for completing the certification and look forward to seeing them implement their learnings."

Sana Saleem Agha, Omema Hassan and Saima Nazli are among the Beaconhouse teachers who completed the certificate.

Sana Saleem Agha said, "It was great to observe that my students felt more positive about their ability to read and have improved reading skills. They have shown great confidence in speaking too. It was observed that they raised and answered questions about the characters, settings, events, etc. from stories easily. Hence, the designed schemes of work had a significant impact on my students."

Omema Hassan said, "I am happy to be part of this unique experience where I felt empowered to choose my own focus, design my own SOW, implement it, and plan further. Learning, unlearning and relearning has made me a reflective practitioner and a better teacher. I now keep on improving my teaching strategies."

Saima Nazli said, "My students have developed a love for reading after the pandemic had drastically deteriorated their reading skills. Furthermore, the SOW helped to develop and regain their confidence in public speaking."

Chris Pope, Co-Director, Professional Training Institute said, "The Professional Training Institute is delighted to congratulate these teachers on their incredible hard work and effort to complete our International Subject Leadership Course. It takes a lot of dedication to complete this course and we couldn't be more thrilled to celebrate their incredible achievement. It is great to see that not only does this help teachers improve their confidence and skills in the classroom, but also translates to the students feeling more inspired."

Beaconhouse and the Professional Training Institute aim to inspire teachers and school leaders to become more effective, enthusiastic, and influential. Their sustainable approach to professional development helps teachers become experts in their subjects and pass on a love of learning to their students.

Poor heart health predicts premature brain aging

ISLAMABAD: By estimating people's brain age from MRI scans using machine learning, a team led by UCL researchers has identified multiple risk factors for a prematurely ageing brain.

They found that worse cardiovascular health at age 36 predicted a higher brain age later in life, while men also tended to have older brains than women of the same age, as they report in The Lancet Healthy Longevity.

A higher brain age was associated with slightly worse scores on cognitive tests, and also predicted increased brain shrinkage (atrophy) over the following two years, suggesting it could be an important clinical marker for people at risk of cognitive decline or other brain-related ill health.

Lead author Professor Jonathan Schott (UCL Dementia Research Centre, UCL Queen Square Institute of Neurology) said: "We found that despite people in this study all being of very similar real ages, there was a very wide variation in how old the computer model predicted their brains to be. We hope this technique could one day be a useful tool for identifying people at risk of accelerated ageing, so that they may be offered early, targeted prevention strategies to improve their brain health."

The researchers applied an established MRI based machine learning model to estimate the brain age of members of the Alzheimer's Research UK-funded Insight 46 study, led by Professor Schott. Insight 46 study members are drawn from the Medical Research Council National Survey of Health and Development (NSHD) 1946 British Birth Cohort. As the participants had been a part of the study throughout their lives, the researchers were able to compare their current brain ages to various factors across the life course.

The participants were all between 69 and 72 years old, but their estimated brain ages ranged from 46 to 93.

The researchers were able to explain roughly one third of the variability in brain age by reviewing various factors from across the life course. People with worse cardiovascular health at age 36 or 69 had worse brain health, as did those with increased cerebrovascular disease on MRI (relating to blood flow and blood vessels in the brain). This aligns with a previous study led by Professor Schott finding that high blood pressure at age 36 predicted poorer brain health late in life.

The study did not identify any associations between childhood cognitive function, education level or socioeconomic status, and a prematurely ageing brain.

The researchers also found that higher brain age was associated with higher concentration of neurofilament light protein (NFL) in the blood. NFL elevation is thought to arise due to nerve cell damage and is increasingly being recognised as a useful marker of neurodegeneration. Dr Sara Imarisio, Head of Research at Alzheimer's Research UK, said: "The Insight 46 study is helping reveal more about the complex relationship between the different factors influencing people's brain health throughout their life. Using machine learning, researchers in this study have uncovered yet more evidence that poorer heart health in midlife is linked to greater brain shrinkage in later life. We're incredibly grateful to the dedicated group of individuals who have contributed to research their entire lives making this work possible." (Courtesy: Science Daily)

Floods-Natural calamity

The ongoing rains' spell in the country has played havoc in the country especially hit hard in low lying areas Sindh, Balochistan where thousands of houses and animals have been swept away by the flood-water. Moreover hundreds of people have also lost their precious lives in this natural calamity which has destroyed the national economy badly.

Chachhro received maximum 117mm rainfall as northern and central districts of Sindh being lashed by heavy monsoon rains. According to figures shared by the Pakistan Meteorological Department (PMD), Islamkot received 53mm rain, while Shaheed Benazirabad 30mm rainfall. Indus River will be in high flood at Sukkur Barrage on Tuesday after the water in the river surged to high flood at Guddu barrage, citing water level recorded at various gauge stations. The water level in the river has surged by 50,000 cusecs at Guddu and Sukkur barrage during last 24 hours. Food-water is pressing barrages and protective dykes along the river.

The railway track has submerged at another spot on the Jamshoro-Manjhand-Sann railway line amid the spell of heavy rainfall in the region. Railway traffic has been suspended on the line from Kotri to Dadu and Larkana as Sindh being lashed by above normal monsoon rains. Floodwater has washed away railway track at three different spots and railway traffic has been suspended for six days now.

Floodwater entered 220KV Dera Murad Jamali grid station in Nasirabad, Balochistan. The supply of electricity to three districts of Nasirabad including, Jaffarabad, Jhal Magsi and Nasirabad has been disconnected from the last 48 hours. The problems of flood-hit people have doubled due to suspension of electricity. The power disconnection has also created shortage of potable drinking water in the area. Pakistan Army troops are carrying out rescue and relief operations in flood-hit areas of Sindh, Balochistan, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and Punjab.

At least 49 people have lost their lives after torrential rains caused flash floods that wreaked havoc in Punjab, prompting authorities to declare all flooded areas of the province calamity-hit. According to details, 51 union councils and 309 villages of six districts were affected by flash floods. At least 49 people lost their lives and 606 were injured in six districts of Punjab – Rajapur, Dera Ghazi Khan, Mianwali, Muzaffargarh, Sialkot and Layyah. The Provincial Disaster Management Authority (PDMA), in its report, stated that the flash floods affected over 0.3 million people and completely damaged 17,277 houses. The floods also damaged a total of 69 schools and seven health centres.

While 805 homes were completely demolished, the report said. The report added that most deaths were reported in the Khairpur district of the Sukkur division. A total of 47 people have been reported dead in Khairpur district.

Rapists freed

This is how justice ends for Indian Muslims?

Apoorvanand

It was Independence Day for rapists and murderers. On August 15, 11 convicts serving life terms for having committed mass murder and gang-rape Muslim women in the Indian state of Gujarat in 2002 were released. The state government had ordered their remission. It is not a coincidence that their release came on a day when India marked 75 years of freedom from colonialism. The men were garlanded when they stepped out of prison. Bilkis Bano, the lone survivor among a group of Muslims who were chased and attacked with lethal weapons as part of a pogrom against the community, received the news of the release of her assailants with shock and disbelief. "How can justice for any woman end like this?" she asked in a statement.

Bilkis, who was five months pregnant at the time, was among three women who were gang-raped by the convicts now set free. Her daughter Saleha's head was smashed before her, killing her instantly. She was three years old. In all, 14 people were murdered in the attack. From that moment, Bilkis fought against the odds and the might of the Gujarat state government then led by current Prime Minister Narendra Modi and still headed by his Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) – for justice. The local police officer, who registered her case, after she walked almost naked from the scene of the crime, distorted her account to make the case weaker, according to the Central Bureau of Investigation, India's premier investigative agency.

Now justice is being trampled upon. After one of the convicts appealed to the Supreme Court for release, the top court of the land asked the Gujarat government to act in keeping with the state's remission policy in 2002. Using holes in that policy, a Gujarat government-appointed committee loaded with BJP members recommended remission in a statement.

Never mind that Bilkis, who lives in close proximity to the homes of the released convicts, must now fear for her life, and the safety of her family, once more. Why was this done on Independence Day? The symbolism is inescapable, especially since Modi had only hours earlier spoken about the need to respect women, in a speech to the nation. It is inconceivable that the Gujarat government could have pressed ahead with the release of the convicts without the consent of the prime minister's office and the office of the home minister, Amit Shah, who is Modi's most trusted lieutenant. Shah held the home office during Modi's time as Gujarat chief minister too.

The message to Bilkis and all those who held her hands while she fought for justice is clear: This is how battles for justice will end in Modi's India; that crimes against Muslims even mass murders and gang rapes will be treated lightly. Sadly, none of this is surprising. After all, it was under Modi's rule in Gujarat that Bilkis first had to run for her life and hide from the state machinery. It was Modi's government in the state that fought her as she battled for justice. Going back further, it is important to remember that Vinayak Damodar Savarkar, one of the ideological gurus of the ruling dispensation, had once justified rape as a legitimate weapon that could deter Muslims from doing the same to Hindu women. It is also not a coincidence that calls for the murder of Muslims and rape of Muslim women have been given by so-called Hindu religious leaders in recent months. Instead of punishing them, Indian authorities have targeted those who exposed this hate speech, such as fact-checker Mohammad Zubair, who was arrested on spurious grounds.

Equally worrying is the role of some bodies that had once stood by Bilkis like the Supreme Court. In June, activist Teesta Setalvad was arrested after the Supreme Court itself suggested that her pursuit of justice for the victims of the Gujarat pogrom was a conspiracy for which action should be taken against her. If the message to Muslims is to not expect justice, the signal to the BJP's supporters is that they are immune from punishment for any crime. That in fact, any allegations that a Hindu has committed a crime against a Muslim must be a conspiracy irrespective of the evidence available. Already, that is the claim being peddled by some regarding the 11 men released in the Bilkis case.

The remission of their sentences has sparked outrage in Indian civil society, with most opposition parties criticising the move. Interestingly, the newest contender for power in Gujarat, the Aam Aadmi Party which rules in the national capital, Delhi, and in the state of Punjab has maintained a studied silence. Is it choosing political expedience over justice? The BJP, through decisions like this which should be abhorrent to all sensitive people is trying to make its constituents, who are mostly Hindu, partners in this perversity. They must speak up against this release. The implications for India's 200 million Muslims are even direr: Justice, even if secured as an exception, can be undone at any moment. Even on a day when they, like other Indians, are celebrating the nation they have always embraced, but that is now turning its back on them.

Europe pays climate change price

Mohammed Almezel

Just when the world thought it was finally out of the woods from coronavirus, 'mother nature' struck again — this time in the form of drought and in the heart of Europe — probably the worst in half a millennium. These headlines are frightening, almost out of a fictional disaster movie. "Europe battles water shortages as severe drought sweeps the continent," says the Financial Times. "Europe's rivers run dry as scientists warn drought could be worst in 500 years: Crops, power plants, barge traffic, industry and fish populations devastated by parched waterways," says the Guardian. Record high temperatures and the lack of rainfall have left most European countries struggling with droughts this summer. Experts warn that the drought will have immediate and long-term devastating effects on agriculture and food security, industrial production, health and water supplies. Climate change is in play in its most destructive ways, shall we say?

That is exactly what the European Drought Observatory says. In its latest release, it said the drought "threatens 60 per cent" of Europe, including the UK, "exacerbated by climate-change driven record heat across Europe this summer." There is also an "increased fire danger due to the lack of rain and the resulting dry vegetation, combined with high temperatures," the European Union's Copernicus Climate Change Service says, noting that wildfires continue to burn across Europe. In England, the past July was the driest since 1935. A picture in the Daily Telegraph told the story: it is of a sign outside a popular supermarket that says customers cannot buy more than three 500ml bottles of water for the sake of other customers! Municipalities across the land banned outdoor hoses.

The French government set up a crisis team to tackle what it described as a "historic drought" that has left more than 100 municipalities short of drinking water. French Prime Minister Elizabeth Borne has issued an official stark warning: "This drought is the most severe recorded in our country." In France and other parts of Europe, famed rivers, where people tend to spend nice quality times in the summer and move goods via freight ships, are being reduced to trickles.

The Drought Climate Services in Italy said that last month was "the driest July in the country since 1800." And things will only get worse as "the drought persists and months pass without rain." In the Netherlands, Minister of Infrastructure and Water Management Mark Harbers called on everyone to "shower quicker and not to wash their cars or water the garden," as the country declared last Wednesday "an official water shortage." And in far away Mexico, the drought's impact is being felt by many vulnerable communities. Water has become a rare commodity in the north of the country. Millions of people in the city of Monterrey today lack drinking water. The authorities designated the water shortage as a matter of national security.

We cannot say that Europe had it coming. But the rise of the right in most Europe countries with conspicuous anti-climate agendas, similar to those of Donald Trump or may have been inspired by him, has left the continent vulnerable to the impact of the global warming that disrupted weather patterns and led to extreme weather conditions such as floods and drought. These weather conditions, brought out by climate change, "are projected to affect availability and distribution of rainfall, snowmelt, river flows and groundwater, and further deteriorate water quality," a report by the United Nations warned exactly a year ago.

It said that more floods and severe droughts are predicted. And the changes in water availability will certainly impact health and food security and "have already proven to trigger refugee dynamics and political instability." Another UN report said that "around 74 per cent of natural disasters between 2001 and 2018 were water-related, including droughts and floods." The frequency and intensity of such disasters are only expected to increase with climate change.

Today, it is Europe that suffers from water shortage — with all its advanced system and innovative technology. Just let us imagine the devastating results of such a calamity on less developed countries.

When the Covid-19 hit China in late 2019 and became a global pandemic by the first two months of 2020, the world came together in its efforts to defeat the pathogen. Urgent measures and rich-to-poor aid helped humanity overcome the deadliest virus in recent times. The virus has so far killed 6.5 million people worldwide. Climate change is definitely a bigger threat. It has the ability, through its multifaceted impacts, to wipe life out on this planet. History says mother nature had done that before. We are literally killing the planet. And, through its complex mechanism and absolute power, it is killing us back. The key word is climate change.

Sugary drinks sweet poison

Obesity has emerged as a global health problem. According to WHO estimates, 1.6 billion adults worldwide are overweight and at least 400 million are obese. According to health experts, overweight and obesity are associated with heart and related diseases, high blood pressure, type 2 diabetes and is a major cause of some types of cancer. The situation in Pakistan is even worse. 41.3% of adults in Pakistan are obese or overweight and 37% suffer from high blood pressure. Overweight and obesity among women of reproductive age increased from 28 percent to 38 percent from 2011 to 2018. In this period, the prevalence of obesity in children under 5 years of age has doubled, which is a major cause of many diseases besides type 2 diabetes. The report of International Diabetes Federation for 2021 alarming data shows that Pakistan is the third largest country of type 2 diabetes worldwide with more than 3.3 million cases and this number has increased from 19.2 million to 33.3 million in just two years.

Pakistan is number 1 in the world with fastest increase in diabetes. According to WHO, non-communicable diseases (NCDS) caused more than 800,000 deaths in Pakistan in 2016, and more than 400,000 deaths were due to diabetes and its complications. 1100 lives are lost every day due to diabetes. If the costs of these diseases are estimated, the cost of obesity in 2015 was estimated at 428 billion Pakistani rupees and the cost of diabetes in 2021 was more than 2640 million US dollars. We need to understand how sugary drinks are a sweet poison. According to health experts, one of the main causes of obesity, diabetes, heart disease and many types of cancer is excessive consumption of sugar, and the most consumption of sugar is in the form of sweet drinks, because one serving of 250 ml of sweet drinks contains 7 to 9 teaspoons of sugar.

These sugary drinks provide the body with 150 calories but contain no nutrients. One does not feel full after consuming them like you feel after a solid meal. This increases the risk of weight gain as well as type II of diabetes, heart disease, high blood pressure and others. Additionally, high consumption of sugary drinks increases the risk of premature death. Household consumption of sugary drinks has increased dramatically in Pakistan over the past 15 years. These eye-opening alarming facts and figures show that we are facing a very serious crisis and we have to go on a war footing to deal with these situations or else our public health system will collapse. We have to see how the world has faced this threat and how we can save our country from this crisis situation by benefiting from the experiences of the world.

Among the ways that the world has reduced the consumption of these drinks to reduce diseases in its country, the first and most effective weapon among the few tested methods is the increase in taxes on them. Along with this, marketing restrictions, school food policy and front of pack labeling are proven strategies. If we only talk about taxes, more than 50 countries in the world have increased taxes on sugary drinks and reduced their consumption, which not only reduced these diseases there, but also increased their revenue from additional taxes. Saudi Arabia was the first country in the Gulf to increase taxes on sugary drinks by 50% and energy drinks by 100% in 2017 and impose a 5% value-added tax on them in 2018. There was a drastic decrease in sales of sodas to 41% and energy drinks to 58% in 2018 as compared to 2016.

The Philippines raised a tax on sugary drinks to generate $40 million in additional revenue that was spent on public health programs. Tax on these drinks in Pakistan is very less than other countries in the region. In India they are taxed at 40%. In Maldives, the health levy on a liter of drink is $2.18, which equates to Rs 335 in Pakistani rupees. Similarly, Qatar and Bahrain increased the tax on energy drinks by 100% and on soda by 50%, which significantly reduced their consumption, while Pakistan has only 13% Federal Excise Duty (FED) and 17% sales tax on carbonated water. There is no FED on juices at all. By taxing these harmful substances, Pakistan can significantly reduce the number of diseases caused by them and also get additional revenue per year which can be spent on public health programs. Thus, it is a win-win situation i.e. reduction in diseases and increase in government revenue. It is requested from the government that instead of taxing the necessities of life, tax should be increased on these harmful things and not compromise on the health of the people for the interests of the beverages industry.

Zelenskiy vows tough response to any Russian attack on I-Day

Wednesday marks six months since Russian invasion

KYIV: As Ukraine prepared to mark both its independence from Soviet rule in 1991 and the six months since Russian troops invaded, President Volodymyr Zelenskiy pledged that any Russian attacks in or around the date would provoke a powerful response.

Zelenskiy, who has led his country's resistance since Russian troops poured over the border on Feb. 24, also said Ukraine would restore its rule over the Crimea region annexed by Russia in 2014 in a precursor to this year's invasion.

Despite his defiance, there was concern among Ukrainian and allied Western officials that Russia was preparing to attack the capital Kyiv once again.

The United States said it believed Russia would target civilian and government infrastructure in the next few days. U.S. citizens should leave Ukraine "now" by their own means if it was safe to do so, the U.S. Embassy said.

On the battlefields, Russian forces carried out artillery and rocket strikes in the Zaporizhzhia region in southeastern Ukraine, where fighting has taken place near Europe's largest nuclear power plant, Ukraine's military said. Russia and Ukraine have blamed each other for strikes on the plant.

Meanwhile leaders of dozens of countries and international organizations were taking part in the so-called Crimea Platform—most of them by video—in solidarity with Ukraine on the six-month anniversary of the invasion. Opening the forum, Zelenskiy, dressed in his customary military gear, told delegates: "To overcome terror, it is necessary to gain victory in the fight against Russian aggression." It is necessary to liberate Crimea. This will be the resuscitation of world law and order," he said.

Italy's acting Prime Minister Mario Draghi told the summit Rome would continue to support Ukraine. "We are with you in your fight to resist Russia's invasion, restore Ukraine's territorial integrity, protect your democracy and independence," he said.

Earlier, Zelenskiy had warned that Moscow might try "something particularly ugly" in the run-up to Wednesday's Independence Day. Asked at a news conference with visiting Polish President Andrzej Duda about the possibility of a Russian missile strike on Kyiv, Zelenskiy said there was a daily threat of attacks although the number of them could increase.

Ukraine's response would be the same for any city that comes under attack from Russia, he said. "They will receive a response, a powerful response," Zelenskiy said. "I want to say that each day ... this response will grow, it will get stronger and stronger."

Fears of intensified Russian attacks followed the killing of Darya Dugina, the daughter of a prominent Russian ultra-nationalist, in a car bombing near Moscow on Saturday. Moscow blamed the killing on Ukrainian agents, a charge Kyiv denies.

Kyiv has only rarely been hit by Russian missiles since Ukraine repelled a ground offensive to seize the capital in March.

The mood in Kyiv was calm on Tuesday, with many people still walking the streets, but signs of increased threat could be felt. An adviser to Zelenskiy told the BBC many civilians were trying to leave Kyiv for fear of a sudden Russian attack.

Authorities told Ukrainians to work from home where possible from Tuesday to Thursday, also urging people to take air raid warnings seriously and seek shelter when sirens sound. The Kyiv city administration banned large public gatherings until Thursday, fearing that a crowd of celebrating residents could become a target for a Russian missile strike.

Rohingya crisis fund is 'well short of needs': UN

GENEVA: An appeal to help Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh is "well short of needs," the United Nations refugee agency (UNHCR) said on Tuesday, as refugees called on donors not to forget the crisis ahead of the fifth anniversary of their exodus from Myanmar.

More than a million Rohingya are living in squalid camps in southern Bangladesh comprising the world's largest refugee settlement, with little prospect of returning to Myanmar, where they are mostly denied citizenship and other rights.

"For the almost 1 million stateless Rohingya refugees, conditions in Bangladesh are extremely overcrowded, and they remain fully reliant on humanitarian assistance for their survival, UNHCR said. "The most commonly unmet needs include proper nutrition, shelter materials, sanitation facilities and livelihood opportunities," a UNHCR statement said. It said its 2022 response plan sought over $881 million for more than 1.4 million people, including Rohingya refugees and more than half a million most affected host communities. So far, it was funded at only 49 percent, with $426.2 million received. "The support from the international community has been and is crucial in delivering lifesaving protection and assistance services for Rohingya refugees but funding is well short of needs."

Refugees said it was crucial the world did not forget the plight of the Rohingya, who are unable to return to Myanmar, but have little future in Bangladesh, with no access to work.

"The global community should not forget our plight.

They should help us as much as they can," Mohammed Taher, a Rohingya refugee in Bangladesh, said. "We are not allowed to work here. We must depend on aid agencies for food," he added.

The Rohingya say they want guarantees of their safety and to be recognized as citizens before returning. The United Nations says conditions are not yet right for return. The vast majority fled to neighboring Bangladesh during a military crackdown in 2017 that the United Nations has said was carried out with genocidal intent.

Myanmar denies genocide, saying it was waging a legitimate campaign against insurgents who attacked police posts. Myanmar is facing charges of genocide at the International Court of Justice in the Hague over the violence.

Record number of migrants arrive in Britain

LONDON: The number of migrants arriving in Britain in small boats hit a record for a single day on Monday, as the rise in dangerous crossings over the English Channel continues despite the government's plans to deport those arriving illegally to Rwanda.

Britain's Ministry of Defense said 1,295 people in 27 boats were intercepted after making the crossing from the European mainland on Monday. The figure surpasses the previous daily record of 1,185 set last November.

The outgoing Prime Minister Boris Johnson had hoped that the threat of deporting people to Rwanda announced in April alongside other efforts, such as handing the navy the responsibility for intercepting migrants, would act as a deterrent to those arriving in dinghies and small boats.

Under an agreement struck in April, Britain will send tens of thousands of migrants who arrive on its shores illegally more than 6,400km to the East African country.

The policy will be the subject of a legal challenge in London's High Court in early September when a coalition of human rights groups and a trade union will argue that the Rwanda policy is unworkable and unethical.

The first planned deportation flight in June was blocked by a last-minute injunction from the European Court of Human Rights.

"The rise in dangerous Channel crossings is unacceptable," a government spokesperson said. "Not only are they an overt abuse of our immigration laws but they risk the lives of vulnerable people, who are being exploited by ruthless criminal gangs."

In 2021, 28,526 people were detected arriving on small boats—with the highest number from Iran followed by Iraq, Eritrea, and Syria. So far this year more than 22,000 migrants have come to Britain, with government officials warning 60,000 could arrive by the end of the year.

Both candidates vying to replace Johnson as prime minister, Liz Truss and Rishi Sunak, have promised to push ahead with the Rwanda plan.

Anti-mandate protesters converge on New Zealand Parliament

WELLINGTON: About 2,000 protesters upset with the government's pandemic response converged Tuesday on New Zealand's Parliament — but there was no repeat of the occupation six months ago in which protesters camped on Parliament grounds for more than three weeks.

Many of the protesters said they had no intention of trying to stay. And police ensured a repeat was unlikely by closing streets, erecting barricades and banning protesters from bringing structures onto Parliament's grounds.

The previous protest created significant disrupt-tions in the capital and ended in chaos as retreating protesters set fire to tents and hurled rocks at police.

This time there was also a counter-protest, with several hundred people gathering in front of Parliament as the main march entered the grounds. The two sides shouted insults but a line of police officers kept them physically separated.

The earlier protest had been more sharply focused on opposition to COVID-19 vaccination mandates. New Zealand's government initially required that health workers, teachers, police, firefighters and soldiers get vaccinated. But it has since removed most of those mandates, with the exception of health workers and some others. It has also removed requirements that people be vaccinated to visit stores and bars.

Tuesday's protest was as much about lingering discontent over the government's handling of the crisis as it was about current rules, including a requirement that people wear masks in stores.

Protester Carmen Page said people who hadn't been vaccinated face ongoing discrimination and people lost their jobs and homes as a result of the mandates, which she said amounted to government overreach. "We're not here to be controlled," Page said. "We just want to live our lives freely. We want to work where we want to work, without discrimination."

At the counter-protest, Lynne Maughan said she and her husband had extended a stay in the capital to attend. "I've got nothing but respect for the mandates, for the vaccinations, for the way the health providers have handled the whole thing," she said. Maughan said the government hadn't done everything perfectly but had done a good job overall.

"There's no blueprint for handling a pandemic," she said.

In 2021, 28,526 people were detected arriving on small boats—with the highest number from Iran followed by Iraq, Eritrea, and Syria. So far this year more than 22,000 migrants have come to Britain, with government officials warning 60,000 could arrive by the end of the year.

Bangkok braces for protests over Thai PM's term limit

BANGKOK: Thai authorities ramped up security in the capital on Tuesday ahead of protests calling on the prime minister to resign, as a court considers whether to take up a petition to rule on when his constitutionally stipulated eight-year term is up.

The main opposition party, and nearly two-thirds of Thais questioned in an opinion poll, believe Prime Minister Prayuth Chan-o-cha, who took power in a 2014 coup, should step down by Aug. 24 because his time as junta chief counts toward his term.

Prayuth, 68, was army chief when he mounted a coup in 2014 to overthrow an elected government. He became a civilian prime minister in 2019 after an election held under a military-drafted constitution.

Police cordoned off areas around the prime minister's offices, known as Government House, in central Bangkok, setting up barricades, including shipping containers, and diverting traffic. Prayuth arrived for a weekly cabinet meeting and is expected to address media later in the day.

Thailand has seen intermittent political turmoil for nearly two decades, including two coups and violent protests, broadly because of opposition to the military's involvement in politics and demands by increasingly politically aware sections of society for greater representation.

But protests have petered out over the past couple of years with the imposition of COVID-19 bans on gatherings. The main opposition Pheu Thai Party has petitioned the Constitutional Court to rule on how long Prayuth can stay in office. The court could decide to hear or dismiss the case on Wednesday.

If the case is accepted, it is unclear if Prayuth would stay as leader or be suspended from duty while a caretaker government takes over. It is not clear when the court would rule on the term limit.

The opposition says Prayuth's tenure as prime minister began in August 2014, a few months after the coup, and should therefore end this month.

But some supporters argue his premiership started in 2017, when a new constitution came into force, or after the 2019 election — meaning he should be allowed to stay on until 2025 or 2027, provided he retains the necessary backing in parliament. A general election is due by May next year.

Indian troops martyr two youth in Rajouri

JAMMU: In Indian illegally occupied Jammu and Kashmir, Indian troops in their fresh act of state terrorism martyred two Kashmiri youth in Rajouri district, on Tuesday.

The troops during their continued violent military operations martyred the youth in Pukharni in Nowshera area of the district.

An official told media men that the troops deployed near the Line of Control killed two persons and their bodies are lying near the fence, while attempts are being made to recover them.

Earlier on Sunday, during operation the troops shot and injured a youth and arrested him while he was looking after his cattle near the Line of Control near the fence.

Angolans prepare for elections amid calls for poll sit-in LUANDA: As Angola — one of Africa's largest oil producers — prepares for a general election Wednesday, voters are debating whether they should vote and sit at the polling stations to monitor the process or cast their ballots and go home.

The call to vote and stay is coming from the longtime opposition party, the Union for the Total Independence of Angola, known as UNITA, which says a large presence of people at polling places is needed to keep the elections accurate.

President Joao Lourenco is running for a second five-year term while his party, the Peoples' Movement for the Liberation of Angola, known by its Portuguese acronym MPLA, is campaigning to extend its 47-year run as the country's ruling party.

Leading the competition is the United Patriotic Front coalition, which includes UNITA and its presidential candidate, Adalberto Costa Junior. UNITA is showing considerable momentum and has succeeded in getting backing from several major opposition figures, including leading intellectuals.

In the 1992 elections, UNITA angrily disputed its loss and plunged the country back into civil war, which lasted for nearly 10 years. This election campaign has been notably peaceful, with few incidents of violence. Both Lourenco and Costa Junior concentrated on speaking about issues, not on attacking the other parties.

"There were a lot of provocations during the campaign, but we decided to not fight back. Instead, we will present our complaints to the courts," said Costa Junior in a well-attended rally in Cazenga, a neighborhood on the outskirts of Luanda.

Over the weekend, at Camama, another Luanda suburb, Lourenco avoided attacking UNITA directly and instead focused on describing the achievements of his government, including an agreement with IMF to support the Angolan economy.

Five other parties and one coalition are contesting the elections, a far cry from the years that the MPLA ruled over the country as a one-party state. This will be the country's fifth multi-party election since 1992. More than 14.3 million people have registered to vote in these elections, of Angola's overall population of 33 million. In the previous general elections in 2017, voter turnout was 57% of those who registered.

Finnish Prime Minister apologizes for party picture

HELSINKI: Finnish Prime Minister Sanna Marin on Tuesday apologized for a picture that emerged from a private party she had thrown at her official residence in July, following a public stir over her partying in the past week.

On Monday, a drug test taken by the prime minister, one of the youngest world leaders, came back negative. It was taken to assuage concerns after video footage was published last week showing her singing and dancing with Finnish celebrities at another party.

This week, another image began circulating in social media, showing two well-known female influencers kissing each other, covering their bare breasts with a "Finland" sign from the Prime Minister's official residence in Helsinki.

"In my opinion, the picture is not appropriate. I apologize for it. That kind of a picture should not have been taken but otherwise, nothing extraordinary happened at the get-together," Marin told reporters, confirming the photo was from her residence.

Marin, 36, who has made no secret of her enjoyment of her leisure time, said the picture was taken during a private party with her friends after a music festival in July.

"We had sauna, swam and spent time together," she said, describing the party at her seaside residence.

Finns have been divided over the premier's behavior, with some voicing support for the young leader for combining a private life with her high-profile career, while others have raised questions about whether her judgment would be impaired by her leisure activities.

Social Democrat leader Marin, who became the world's youngest serving government leader in December 2019, agreed on Friday to take the drug test, saying she had never taken drugs and that she had not seen anyone doing so at the party she attended.

Marin said in January that she and her fellow young female ministers have been targeted with extensive hate speech for their gender and appearance while in office.

Ranking boost for Pakistan following dominant series sweep

Pakistan receive a boost by moving to 107 rating points in fourth

DUBAI: White-ball powerhouses Pakistan and India have been rewarded for recent series sweeps by making ground on the leading teams on the latest set of ICC ODI Team Rankings.

On Sunday, Netherlands produced a compelling performance to come close to beating Pakistan in the final match of the series in Rotterdam, but Pakistan held their nerve to claim ten Super League points and seal a 3-0 series victory.

Those latest results saw India improve their ODI ranking to 111 rating points and third place overall, while Pakistan also received a boost by moving to 107 rating points in fourth. And the pair have made ground on rankings leader New Zealand (124) following the Black Caps' narrow 2-1 series triumph over the West Indies, while England (119) remain dormant in second place as they continue their ongoing World Test Championship series against South Africa.

The Kiwis did hold a nine-point advantage at the top of the team rankings, but the fact they lost one 50-over match during their tour of the Caribbean saw their lead reduced to just five rating points. New Zealand don't have to wait long before they get the chance to build on their lead, with their three-match series against trans-Tasman rivals Australia coming early next month in Cairns.

A series loss in Australia could see New Zealand relinquish the rankings lead to England, while Australia (101) may get the chance to overhaul Pakistan and move into fourth place with a dominant showing over the next few weeks.

Australia host Zimbabwe for three matches in Townsville starting later this month, before they take on the Kiwis in what will be a hectic two-week period of quickfire back-to-back series' for Aaron Finch's side.

India's next chance to make further ground on the ODI rankings comes when they host South Africa for three ODIs at the start of October, while Pakistan don't have any further 50-over matches fixtured until after the T20 World Cup in Australia later this year.

Wasim Akram believes Pakistan can beat India 'day in and day out'

ISLAMABAD: Former captain Wasim Akram has said that Pakistan's win against India in the opening match of the 2021 T20 World Cup in the UAE had boosted their confidence and now they "believe they can beat India day in and day out".

"Pakistan team is on the rise for the past couple of years. They've been consistent, and I think the win against India, although that was a year ago during the World Cup, gave them a bit of confidence that they can compete against India day in and day out," Wasim said in a media session, organised by Star sports.

Akram sounded optimistic but wanted Pakistan players to be mindful of how their inherent strength—the top order—should not become a weakness. "Since the start of last year's T20 World Cup, Pakistan's top three have scored 67.53% of all runs made by the team in T20Is. This has largely been down to Babar Azam, Mohammad Rizwan and Fakhar Zaman," he noted.

"The only thing I'm worried about is the middle order. There is no experience apart from Iftikhar Ahmed coming in at No. 4, and then you'll have probably Haider Ali, a young sensation who has not been consistent. Babar Azam and Rizwan are the key as far as the T20 format is concerned," he said.

"I think in general they are confident, but it depends on how they feel or what sort of mindset they are in when they arrive before the India-Pakistan game because that game can make to break the Asia Cup for either side," he added. The erstwhile bowling great said comparisons between Pakistan captain Babar and Virat Kohli were inevitable, given the kind of impact they have had on their respective teams.

"It's only natural. When we played, people compared Inzamam-ul-Haq with Rahul Dravid or Sachin Tendulkar. Before that, it was Javed Miandad versus Sunny Gavaskar. Gundappa Viswanath and Zaheer Abbas, so it is (comparison) only natural. "Babar has been very consistent because he has the right technique. He enjoys his batting, is still very hungry, physically fit, still young and is captain across formats. He is learning and learning very quickly. APP

Zimbabwe name ODI squad for tour of Australia

HARARE: Zimbabwe named a 15-member squad for the ODI series against Australia with Blessing Muzarabani returning from a muscle tear that kept him out of action for a while.

Blessing Muzarabani returned to Zimbabwe's ODI squad after recovering from a thigh muscle tear for the tour of Australia later this month. The three-match ODI series, which begins on Sunday, is Zimbabwe's first tour Down Under since 2003-04.

Muzarabani was the only new member in the team that faced India recently at home in the ODIs. Regis Chakabva will continue to lead the side in the absence of regular skipper Craig Ervine, who is still recovering from a hamstring injury. Tendai Chatara, who has a collarbone fracture, Wellington Masakadza, who injured his shoulder tendon and Milton Shumba, who has a quadriplegic injury, remain absent.

Zimbabwe ODI squad: Ryan Burl, Regis Chakabva (captain), Brad Evans, Luke Jongwe, Innocent Kaia, Tadzwanashe Kaitano, Clive Madande, Wesley Madhevere, Tadzwanashe Marumani, Tony Munyonga, Blessing Muzarabani, Richard Ngarava, Victor Nyauchi, Sikandar Raza, Sean Williams.

England's top scorer White retires on a high

LONDON: England women's all-time top goal scorer Ellen White has retired from the game, the 33-year-old forward announced on Monday, saying she had fulfilled her dream of becoming a European champion last month.

White, who has 52 goals for England in 113 appearances since her debut in 2010, scored twice in England's European Championship campaign last month as the hosts won the title after beating Germany in the final for their first major trophy.

"This has been one of the hardest decisions of my life but one that I know is the right decision for me. This decision has always been one I have wanted to make on my terms," White said in a statement.

"And this is my time to say goodbye to football and watch the next generation shine. It has been my greatest honour and privilege to play this game. In particular playing for England has and always will be the greatest gift. My dreams came true on 31st July, winning the Euros and becoming a European champion."

Her club Manchester City also confirmed she had retired from all football. "Thank you Ellen for everything you have done during your time at City. Everyone at the club is wishing you all the best for the future," City said. White is the second-highest goal scorer in the Women's Super League after Arsenal's Dutch forward Vivianne Miedema.

A three-times England women's player of the year, White won several trophies with Arsenal between 2011-2013 before spells with Notts County and Birmingham City. In 2019, she joined Manchester City where she won the FA Cup and League Cup.

Although success had eluded England until last month's Euros, White was still the joint top scorer at the 2019 World Cup while she also netted six times for Britain at last year's Tokyo Olympics.

"Don't ever let someone tell you, 'you can't do something or achieve your dreams'. I was once told I couldn't play in the boys team and I would never play for England," White added.

"Now I am retiring having made 113 caps with 52 goals for England and a European Champion. Go out there and be the very best version of you!" Her 52 strikes puts her second on the all-time list of England's top goal scorers in both men's and women's football, behind former striker Wayne Rooney who scored 53 international goals.

Hockey trials under 'PM Youth Talent Hunt' begin

PESHAWAR: Hockey trials under Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif Youth Talent Hunt Programme kicked off on Tuesday.

The two-day trials, for both men and women, are being held simultaneously at two different venues. The venue for men's trials was AstroTurf of Islamia College Ground, and that for women's trials was Abdul Wali Khan Sports Complex Charadda.

Director Sports UoP Bahre Karam and Maria Samin Jan are supervising the trials.

Ex-MPA and President of PML-Nawaz's Women's youth wing Amina Sardan, focal person of the PML-Nawaz's women wing Faiza Malik Advocate, Project Director of the talent hunt programme Rafiq Ali Naz, Coordinator Youth Affairs for Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Engineer Muhammad Arif Rawan, President of KP Hockey Association Syed Zahir Shah, Member Selection Committee Zia Ur Rehman Binori, Deputy Director Sports Shaheed Benazir Bhutto Women University Maria Samin Jan, AD and Game Coordinator Rozneen and Najma Qazi were also present.

Amina said that it was heartening to see a large number of girls participating in the trials.

"I am grateful for organizing such an excellent event, because through such activities the hidden talent of youth can be revealed, and the country and the nation can be glorified. "In today's social media era, it is commendable to attract girls towards positive activities and to popularise sports fields," she said.

Project Director HEC Rafiq Ali Naz said that the prime objective of the talent hunt programme was to find out new talent from across the country. It included 12 men's and 10 women's games. The hockey trials were also a part of it, he added.

He said that the HEC was trying its best to ensure the selection of athletes on the basis of merit in the games because selection on merit alone could provide opportunities to win medals at the national and international levels.

Two Pakistan stars feature in Watson's top five T20I players

SYDNEY: Australia great Shane Watson has revealed the five players he would select first if given the unenviable task of choosing a World T20 XI.

Watson is renowned as one of Australia's best white-ball players of all time, and the star all-rounder further strengthened his credentials by showcasing his talents in various domestic T20 leagues around the world for over a decade.

In recent times, Watson has turned to coaching to nurture the best limited-overs players in the world and the 41-year-old only this year joined the Delhi Capitals as their assistant coach in the Indian Premier League.

Watson uses that role to keep a close eye on the best

T20I players around the world and is eagerly awaiting the ICC T20 World Cup in Australia later this year. Speaking on the latest episode of The ICC Review, Watson was asked by host Sanjana Ganesan to select the first five players he would choose to play for a World T20 XI in Australia.

"First one I'd pick would be Babar Azam," Watson said. "He's the No.1 T20I batsman in the world, and he just knows how to dominate."

"It's like he's not even taking any risks, and he scores incredibly quickly against the best bowlers in the world. "He's going to do very well in Australian conditions (during the T20 World Cup) as well, as his technique is very much built for Australian conditions."

"And the last one is Shaheen Afridi," Watson said. "His wicket-taking ability is something special. "We saw in the last men's T20 World Cup his ability to be able to get the best batsmen out with that brand new ball. I'd be very surprised if he doesn't really dominate in Australian conditions, with the ball swinging around and fast, bouncy wickets."

"My only concern with him is, if he doesn't take wickets to start with, then he can tail off a little bit. "But I'm sure he's been working on that. I'd be surprised if he doesn't dominate here."
