Staff Reporter

Claiming that due to the PTI, overseas Pakistanis are facing a ban on joining the political party, Imran said that if the overseas Pakistanis are not 'acceptable', then there is no need to take remittances from them. Imran asked the ECP to tell what happened with the funding cases of the Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N) and Pakistan People's Party (PPP).

The PTI supremo [Imran] reiterated that if fair and free elections will not be held, then the country would not bear the consequences. The former prime minister also added that the process of the appointments of the CEC and its members, as well as the NAB Chairman should have to be changed.

"With the Daska election, I came to know that the entire game has been changed. I fully believe that the plan to disqualify me has already been made", claimed Imran.

KP Police 'assault' on teachers 'condemnable': Marriyum

Staff Reporter

ISLAMABAD: Minister for Information and Broadcasting Marriyum Aurangzeb on Thursday said the assault and pelting of stones on the teachers by the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa police in Peshawar was "condemnable and shameful". "Imran Khan, who seeks Haqqeeqi Azadi under the guise of so-called conspiracy, is stoning the teachers in KP on demanding salaries," she said in a news statement.

The teachers were bemoaning Imran Khan's economic revolution, which had been imposed on the people of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa for last eight years, she added. Marriyum said the teachers held the Haqqeeqi Azadi (real freedom) march at the Peshawar Assembly Chowk to get rid of Imran Khan's "fascism and tyranny". The payment of salaries and pension to the working and retired government employees in KP had been stopped on the orders of Imran Khan, she claimed.

World Bank: Pakistan's economy slows down

While inflation rises amid catastrophic floods

ISLAMABAD: Pakistan's economy is expected to grow by only 2 percent in the current fiscal year ending June 2023. According to the World Bank's October 2022 Pakistan Development Update: Inflation and the Poor, the slower growth will reflect damages and disruptions caused by catastrophic floods, a tight monetary stance, high inflation, and a less conducive global environment. Recovery will be gradual, with real GDP growth projected to reach 3.2 percent in fiscal year 2024.

Poverty in the hardest-hit regions will likely worsen in the context of the recent flooding. Preliminary estimates suggest that - without decisive relief and recovery efforts to help the poor - the national poverty rate may increase by 2.5 to 4 percentage points, pushing between 5.8 and 9 million people into poverty. Macroeconomic risks also remain high as Pakistan faces challenges associated with a large current account deficit, high public debt, and lower demand from its traditional export markets amid subdued global growth.

"The recent floods are expected to have a substantial negative impact on Pakistan's economy and on the poor, mostly through the disruption of agricultural production," said Najy Benhassine, the World Bank's Country Director for Pakistan. "The Government must strike a balance in meeting extensive relief and recovery needs, while staying on track with overdue macroeconomic reforms. It will be more important than ever to carefully target relief to the poor, constrain the fiscal deficit within sustainable limits, maintain a tight monetary policy stance, ensure continued exchange rate flexibility, and make progress on critical structural reforms, especially those in the energy sector."

This Update also outlines potential strategies to manage the impacts of high inflation. Inflation in Pakistan is expected to reach around 23 percent in FY23, reflecting flood-related disruptions to the supply of food and other goods, higher energy prices, and difficult external conditions, including tighter global monetary conditions. The Update shows that the high inflation will disproportionately impact the poor.

"While relief measures are needed to cushion the impacts of flooding, it will be critical to ensure that these are targeted towards those most in need," said Derek H. C. Chen, author of the report. "Pakistan has previously resorted to energy subsidies, but our analysis shows that such measures disproportionately benefit better-off households, while imposing unsustainable fiscal costs. Going forward, the priority should be to tame inflation through sound macroeconomic policies. These should be accompanied by measures to provide targeted relief to those hit hardest by rising prices, including through expanded social protection programs, and to address the distortions that discourage trade and productivity."

The Pakistan Development Update is a companion piece to the South Asia Economic Focus, a twice-a-year World Bank report that examines economic developments and prospects in the South Asia region and analyzes policy challenges faced by countries. The Fall 2022 edition titled Coping with Shocks: Migration and the Road to Resilience, launched on October 6, 2022, shows that growth in South Asia is dampening due to recent major global and regional shocks including rising inflation; the impacts of the global food, fertilizer and fuel shortages; the economic crisis in Sri Lanka; and the catastrophic floods in Pakistan. It also analyzes the impacts of COVID-19 on migration and the role labor mobility and migration can play in facilitating economic development. APP

When the host pressed the former information minister on Memon's statement that Khan had abused.

Fawad responded jokingly and said: "He also took a big risk by agreeing to go to the washroom with a Pathan."

PTI MPA asks Fawad to seek 'Haqiqi Azadi' for his thinking

Reacting to Fawad's remarks, PTI MPA Dr Hisham Inam Ullah Khan said that he thinks that the former federal minister disrespected the Pathans with the comments he made in jest.

"How did he become part of the PTI if he holds such a thinking," asked Dr Hisham, adding that the party's founder is also a Pathan.

"Pathans are behind the success of this movement," said the PTI MPA from Lakki Marwat. Pathans, Punjabis, Sindhis, and Baloch worked together to build Pakistan, he added.

Govt is not involved in audio leaks: PM

Shehbaz Sharif says Imran Khan committed treason; inflicted "irreparable damage" to country's reputation

Staff Reporter

ISLAMABAD: Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif on Thursday said that by building a deceitful narrative of conspiracy against his government, Imran Khan committed a treason against Pakistan and its people and inflicted an irreparable damage to the country's reputation.

He said sans the audio leak, the ambiguity could prevail for years but Allah blessed the nation by exposing Imran Khan's "fraud, deceit and worst conspiracy" against Pakistan.

Govt completing CPEC projects on priority: PM

ISLAMABAD: Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif on Thursday said that the government was completing the projects under China Pakistan Economic Corridor on priority which were deliberately delayed by the previous government during the last four years. The prime minister, in a meeting with a delegation of the China Road and Bridge Corporation, headed by President Ye Chengyin, said the government was answerable to the masses for the protection of public money. Mentioning the deliberate delay in development projects by the previous government, the prime minister said the nation had identified its foes. He said the government was also ensuring transparency in the development projects besides prioritizing the public interest projects. Staff Reporter

"The audio tells all. Is there any doubt yet as to who hatched conspiracy? Who are the real conspirators? It was Imran Khan and his cronies," the prime minister told a press conference here at the PM House.

He said the coalition government was trying to revive bit-by-bit the ties with other countries damaged by Imran Khan.

"It was the worst dishonesty, a game played with the nation's confidence that hurt the nation's integrity. This is unprecedented in country's history," he remarked rubbing Imran Khan's allegation of his role behind the audio leak. He said if he had been behind this, his own audio leak would not have surfaced.

Recalling the process of the vote of no-confidence against Imran Khan and the rejection of the motion by that time deputy speaker, the prime minister said Imran Khan and his party had wasted the nation's time.

"Thankfully Imran Khan did a telethon and we raised money for the flood victims which we are distributing through the Ehsaas programme. Now many donors are in touch with us directly."

Reacting to Punjab Interior Minister Hashim Dogar's statement that the Punjab government will not support Khan's long-march call on Islamabad, Elahi said that he will see how the situation evolves and a decision will be made accordingly.

Elahi said that Interior Minister Rana Sanaullah will not have anywhere to hide if former prime minister Imran Khan gives a long march call.

He said that there is a PTI government in Punjab, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, Gilgit-Baltistan and Azad Kashmir and Sanaullah would not be able to find a place to hide in Islamabad if Imran Khan's supporters would converge on the federal capital as part of his Haqiqi Azadi movement.

UK firmly stands with Pakistan in flood relief efforts: Angela Rayner

ISLAMABAD: British Deputy Opposition Leader of the Lower House and Deputy Leader of Labour Party Ms Angela Rayner on Thursday said that the United Kingdom firmly stood with the flood-hit Pakistan and supported its relief efforts for the affected people.

"The world needs to find a sustainable way of ensuring that people are not as devastated by the lives lost here in Pakistan and the disruption that has happened to the people here," she said in an interview.

Ms Angela Rayner, who along with Member of House of Lords Wajid Khan visited the flood affected areas, said efforts should be made to prevent such a catastrophe going forward into the future.

The climate change was rapidly affecting the world and Pakistan had become its first victim, and it required extraordinary efforts and collaboration to tackle the issue, she added.

The United Kingdom, she said, would raise the issue and ask for a sustainable solution to combat it in the upcoming COP27 meeting in Egypt next month.

"I hope that the bilateral talks will mean that more support will come to Pakistan and other areas of the globe that have faced the devastation of climate change but in a more sustainable and structured way."

She further stated that the world had to protect the people's future from the climate change effect as it was devastatingly affecting the humanity.

Speaking about her visit to the flood-affected areas of Pakistan, Angela Rayner said it was devastating to see how the people have to endure the crisis.

Hundreds of thousands of people had been affected by the flash floods, besides losses of life and property, and standing crops, which

Moreover, she added, the British Pakistani diaspora had immediately been incredible regarding the relief effort. "Many fundraisers and support have been offered, the Pakistani diaspora in the UK has been incredibly generous, and part of the reason why I'm here is that I wanted to, as a UK politician is that Pakistan hasn't been forgotten, even in my own constituency Ashton-under-Lyne underlying they've been from raising and doing so much to help the flood relief efforts."

To a question, she explained the bilateral trade and said Pakistan had a very challenging economic time. However, the British industry was supporting Pakistan's Industry. The longer-term goal for both Pakistan and the UK was to build that trading partnership. APP

ISLAMABAD: The Workshop on 'Enhancing SDG6 Water Quality Monitoring in Pakistan' was held at the Serena Hotel Islamabad at 6th, in the presence of Ambassador Suh Sangpyo of the Republic of Korea to Pakistan, the Minister of Climate Change of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan Senator Sherry Rehman and Country Director Je Ho Yeon from Korea International Cooperation Agency (KOICA).

This workshop consisted of 4 sessions; involving Introduction of Enhancing SDG 6 Water Quality Monitoring in Pakistan led by KOMIR, Perspective of Water Quality Monitoring in development agenda of Pakistan by MoCC, Water Policy in Korea led by K-Water and Climate Change and Water Resource Management in Pakistan led by MoCC. The Q&A and Discussion sessions were held after each session.

Korea International Cooperation Agency (KOICA) is a government aid agency of the Republic of Korea (ROK), founded in 1991. KOICA implements Korea's grant and technical cooperation of the ROK, supporting the socio-economic development of many developing countries. In 2010, KOICA opened its regional office in Islamabad, Pakistan. The office implements various projects in Transport, Energy, Water Management and Health, Rural Development.

Similarly, "Capacity Building on Water Quality Monitoring and SDG 6 (6.1) Reporting" Project was signed as agreement to extend cooperation on enhancing water quality monitoring and to improve capacity of the Government of Pakistan to achieve SDG 6 between Ministry of Climate Change (MoCC) and Korea International Cooperation Agency (KOICA) with a cost of 7.42 million dollar from 2019 to 2024. Under this project KOICA will provide water quality testing equipment and training to PHED (Public Health Engineering Department) laboratories and enhance MIS (Management Information System) in Punjab and KP provinces.

In addition, consultation and technical suggestions on water related policy and legislative reform will be also supported through this project. KOICA works with 3 professional PMCs (Project Management Consultant; Korea Mine Rehabilitation and Mineral Resources Corporation, K-Water and GDC Consulting) from Korea and UNOPS for laboratory equipment procurement for Enhancing SDG6 Water Quality Monitoring in Pakistan. Further along this project KOICA conducted the Working level invitational training in Korea by K-Water last Aug 18th to Sep 6th for 9 officers from MoCC, Punjab PHED, KP PHED and PCRWR. And KOICA will conduct the High-level invitational training and Master trainer invitational training next year.

The concept of the workshop was to build practical strategies to improve water quality and SDG 6 challenges to effectively monitor water quality and SDG-6 along with surveillance and management systems. Speakers and participants at a workshop developed an understanding about the importance of water quality monitoring as fundamental for sustainable water management along with significance of water quality data as a crucial element for the assessment of water quality trends and changes in freshwater resources with the identification of emerging water quality issues.

In the end participants were able to find local solutions to the challenges of water quality monitoring and management, while exploring how the system transformation for water security and management can be achieved. Participants of the workshop including KOICA, K-Water Korea, and other provincial and federal relevant stakeholders along with Ministry of Climate Change Present workshop will be the baseline for future policy reforms, technical support and to strengthen the coordination mechanism between KOICA, federal and provinces stakeholders of Pakistan on the most pressing issue of water quality. Equally as the recent flood disaster in the country has further aggravated the situation which calls for a rigorous mechanism for water quality monitoring, evaluation, and management in future.

Government is providing 20% costly electricity: Dr Khurram

M.A Rashid

FAISALABAD: Government is providing 20% costly electricity while industries, particularly the textile sector, was not receiving any subsidy instead it is providing cross-subsidy to the government, claimed Dr Khurram Tariq, President Faisalabad Chamber of Commerce & Industry (FCCI).

He said that the export sector must get electricity at regionally competitive tariff for its sustained presence in the global markets. He said that the government is presenting circular debt, wrong decisions of previous governments, payment to costly thermal power houses on capacity basis, power pilferage, high line losses and poor recoveries as justification to increase the electricity rates. He asked, if exporters could export circular debt or line losses? "If it is not possible, then why are industrialists being punished for the wrongdoings of the others", he quipped.

He categorically refuted the notion that the government was providing subsidies to the five major export sectors. He said that factual position is contrary to it, as industrialists are providing cross subsidy to the government for its wrong decisions in the past. He said that the government must seriously take the issue of costly electricity to save the export sector from total annihilation.

Dr Khurram Tariq President Faisalabad Chamber of Commerce & Industry (FCCI) departed for the Holy Lands to perform Umrah. During his stay in Makkah and Medina, he will visit holy sites and pray for the progress, prosperity and solidarity of Pakistan. He is expected to return back on Sunday after completing this religious journey.

Pakistan is an extremely exciting opportunity for us: Liezl Gericke

Says we're investing in our network and our operations in Pakistan are integral to this journey

Naveed Ahmad Khan

ISLAMABAD: Virgin Atlantic the Head of the Middle East, Africa and India Liezl Gericke says 'we are currently flying with strong load factors on Pakistan routes. In September we flew with a 98% load factor Ex-Pakistan collectively across all routes and the outlook for the rest of the year is promising' she addressed a press conference at the Islamabad Serena Hotel.

Alex McEwan, Country manager South Asia and Hanif Zikrai, Senior Vice President of Gerry's International also present at the press conference.

Liezl said, 2022 is the start of a new phase for Virgin Atlantic, as we recover from the Covid pandemic and deliver our best for our customers and our people. Our vision is clear: to become the most loved travel company and sustainably profitable. 'We're investing in our network and our operations in Pakistan are integral to this journey. We are back strong, offering new routes, with more flights and brand new next generation aircraft, with the youngest fleet on the transatlantic, now just under 7 years on average.

She thanked all the trade partners for supporting Virgin Atlantic from the day it launched flights in Pakistan. This journey would have not been possible without their support, she said.

To a question about floods in Pakistan and global warming, she said the climate crisis is the single greatest challenge of our lifetime. The climate crisis will not be solved by one industry, like aviation, or by one player within that industry, like airlines. It requires coordinated and consistent progress to be made against ambitious climate goals by individuals, industries and governments.

'Fleet transformation, aircraft technology, and SAF supply are crucial to the aviation industry decarbonising, but of equal importance is the need for the global industry to continue working together as a coalition of the willing. Realising the devastating impact of carbon emission on the environment, Virgin Atlantic has been striving to do better for our planet and we're taking action. We're investing in research, new technologies and innovation to reduce our impact in the air and on the ground', she added.

Sharing Virgin Atlantic actions towards this end Ms Liezl said the time for action against climate change is now. We've announced a set of ambitious interim milestones to take Virgin Atlantic to net zero by 2050. We were the first airline to fly a commercial aircraft using sustainable aviation fuel back in 2008 and by 2019 we had already achieved 18% reduction in CO2 emission through this initiative.

Ms Liezl said, Pakistan is an extremely exciting opportunity for us as the UK is home to the largest Pakistani Diaspora community outside of Pakistan with over 1.5 million people. The UK-Pakistan market has always displayed strong underlying growth annually, with a strong combination of business and leisure passengers, which gives us confidence about the long-term potential.

While commenting on the suspension of operations between Manchester and Islamabad she said, as international travel rebounds, we're continually reviewing our network, taking into account aircraft availability and the services which support the greatest customer demand. We've taken the decision not to operate Manchester - Islamabad services this winter but will evaluate opportunities to resume this route in future seasons, and in the meantime, the service continues twice-weekly until the end of October from our home in the North

'We look forward to meeting continued demand for leisure and business travel with direct scheduled services to Pakistan, with our Heathrow-Islamabad and Heathrow-Lahore services now on sale for the Winter 2022 season'.

While talking about the business prospects in Pakistan she said Pakistan has been one of the quickest markets to recover following Covid. VFR traffic was resilient throughout Covid, and as travel restrictions were unlocked earlier this year, we saw a surge of pent-up demand from all segments. 'We are currently flying with strong load factors on Pakistan routes. In September we flew with a 98% load factor Ex-Pakistan collectively across all routes and the outlook for the rest of the year is promising'.

She added, a significant number of passengers connect onto our extensive US network from Pakistan via London Heathrow. Islamabad/Lahore to New-York is our largest connecting traffic flow currently.

Virgin Atlantic carried over 120k passengers between the UK and Pakistan in 2021 and was the number one carrier for the year and in 2022 again, we are leading the market for point-to-point travel to the UK. Recently held Skytrax Awards, Virgin Atlantic also took home the award for best business class lounge as well as world's best premium economy offering.

Govt can earn over Rs55b by passing Health Contribution Bill: PANAH

Spokesman Report

ISLAMABAD: Tax on petroleum products and agricultural commodities will affect the common man while tax on sugary drinks will not only generate revenue for the government but will also help in reducing diseases.

The Health Contribution Bill has been stalled in the Cabinet since April 2022 and its passage could support Pakistan's economy, reduce the burden of disease and help fund health and nutrition programs. This was said while talking to senior journalists by Pakistan National Heart Association in a local hotel in Islamabad. Senior journalists from electronic and print media participated in the program. The workshop was hosted by PANAH General Secretary Sanaullah Ghuman. Mr. Munawar Hussain, Consultant Food Policy Program of Global Health Advocacy Incubator was also present among the guests.

Speaking with journalists, Mr. Sanaullah Ghuman said that the beverage industry is misleading the policy makers at every step and creating hurdles in the policy process. It is unfortunate that the Health Contribution Bill presented by the Ministry of National Health Services, Regulations and Coordination is pending in the Cab-

net. Earlier the bill was stalled in the FBR and PANAH petitioned the Ombudsman in 2020 to revive the bill and was successful. However, the beverage and tobacco industries are trying to block this bill at every step because of their corporate interests and have no interest in public health.

Mr. Munawar Hussain, Consultant Food Policy Program of the Global Health Advocacy Incubator, said that the passage of the Health Contribution Bill is a great opportunity for the Government of Pakistan to generate revenue to fund health and nutrition programs. This bill could generate revenue of over 55 billion annually and will also help reduce the burden of disease. He said that excessive consumption of sugary drinks is a growing threat to the country's economy. In 2015, the cost of treating obesity was estimated at 428 billion rupees.

Similarly, according to the International Diabetes Federation, the annual cost of diabetes management in Pakistan has increased to 2640 million US dollars in 2021. He requested the Prime Minister, Finance Minister and Health Minister of Pakistan to intervene. Build consensus for the speedy passage of this life-saving health contribution bill.

The dangers of Europe's extreme political polarization

Khaled Abou Zahr

In today's political landscape, the best way I have found to describe the far right and its leftist equivalent is the following: The supporters of a far-right agenda have nostalgia for a time they have never lived through or known, while the far left have rage and indignation against an oppression they have never suffered from. The far right is dreaming of an old world where family, work and nation were the cornerstones of society — a vision that no longer exists in the West. The far left is rebelling and bringing down old statues and yelling with rage against oppressions that ended centuries ago, such as slavery, and using it to justify the breaking down of current systems and institutions. It is quite a strange situation that resembles the creation of a new virtual reality in politics.

We can clearly notice throughout the West that the divide between the left and the right is becoming wider. Lately, Europe has seen a clear movement toward a bigger representation of right-wing movements and positive election results for right-wing candidates. It is what can be best described as a rise of popular sentiment against "wokeness" and the left's progressive agenda. This is showing all over Europe. It might have started in Central Europe with Hungary and some neighboring countries, but this shift is now happening almost everywhere. Even France, despite this year's election results, is witnessing this change. The same applies to the election results in Sweden and finally Italy.

The change in Italy has been marked by a full union or alliance of right-wing parties. There is a clear union with a refusal to be described as extremist groups, and the ballots have been favorable to this change. This might be the biggest difference with France and other countries in Europe, where the right is still fragmented. Until this day, we have been used to an alliance of leftist and green movements that has been able to reap positive results. In France, through the New Ecological and Social People's Union, the left was able to challenge President Emmanuel Macron's movement and defeat the right in the last legislative elections without achieving a full majority.

This change has brought, throughout Europe and the West in general, greater violence in the political confrontation between left and right. On both sides, the voices we hear are the extremes, while the voices of reason are being silenced. There is populism on both sides and common sense is being destroyed. The far left and far right both present dangerous choices. When analyzing the situation, we notice both sides are completely disconnected, they create their own realities (through social media) and both promise the unachievable. They share conspiracy theories and create their own stories that their audiences eat up.

If politics should be the art of the possible, it has now become the art of ping pong.

If politics should be the art of the possible, it has now become the art of ping pong. There is no real debate or reason. It is about taking the opposite view and, in this game, the left always serves first. "If they are with Ukraine, then we should be with Russia." "If they are for the vaccines, then we should be against them." And it goes on and on. One must nevertheless admit that the far-left extremists, who are just as dangerous as those on the right, usually get much better press. Politics boosted by social media has become a mob's business. More and more, very active small groups are capable of steering the majority to their own will.

And thus, the far left has, in a sense, taken over the agenda of the traditional left. In fact, the right's political forces are reacting to the left's actions. The agenda of the far left in the West is — by its own admission — to break and destroy all institutions and the established order and values. This has created fear, especially in a difficult economic and social environment. With a change in the global order, the far right is positioning itself as the last line of defense against this chaos and unknown in an attempt to reestablish order domestically and internationally.

This current situation reminds me of a French political analyst commenting on the election of the first socialist president of the Fifth Republic, Francois Mitterrand, in 1981. He said that this was the end of France as they knew it. He continued by saying that the best way to run a government is to have a right-wing administration with a strong and active counterpower from the left. In this manner, you keep order while also advancing toward a better society.

Thankfully, there are voices of reason on both sides. Unfortunately, they are too decent to be heard or respected. The voices that now lead the debate on both sides are the ones that are the most ferocious. This is in line with the uncertainties the world is going through. Who do you want to defend your interests when things go bad? The nice guy or the ruthless one? This puts Europe in a dangerous and difficult situation, especially with a volatile global geopolitical environment and precarious economic conditions. A full-on confrontation can go beyond virtual reality politics and into the streets.

Pakistan, China ties further improving

Pakistan has close, friendly and decades old ties with China. China was the only country that invested heavily in different sectors of Pakistan when the other countries were hesitant due the threat of terrorism in the country. The President of Pakistan has rightly said that the partnership between Pakistan and China will continue to flourish in every sector for the mutual benefit. With the support of China and through the China Pakistan Economic Corridor project, Pakistan has managed to improve its infrastructure, overcome energy crisis and completed various development projects. Despite the conspiracies against this mega project by different countries, the CPEC is going on with good momentum. Pakistan will be connected with the international markets through CPEC and our trade relations will improve.

The crux of the China Pakistan Economic Corridor project will be the establishment of nine special economic zones in all the provinces of the country. These economic zones will provide job opportunities to our youth and there will be economic development as well. In the first phase of the project, 10,000MW electricity was added to the national grid that reduced the problem of load-shedding. In the second phase, the focus was on infrastructure and development of Gwadar Port. We hope that the present government, with its determination and good understanding with the Chinese officials, will manage to complete the CPEC within specified time. The President while addressing a Roundtable Conference on CPEC has said that Pakistan will soon emerge as a strong country in the comity of nations. Many countries including Turkey, Russia and others are willing to become part of this game changing project.

China Pakistan Economic Corridor project is a joint venture of China and Pakistan and it was initiated at the time when Pakistan was virtually isolated and no country was interested to invest in Pakistan due to the terrorism. In the first phase of the project, the focus was on the power related projects and in the second phase, the government is focusing on the establishment of special economic zones which is a great development. Certain employment opportunities are being generated through this mega project. The need of the hour is to ensure the timely completion of all the development projects under CPEC within specified time. China is a time-tested friend of Pakistan and both the countries are determined to defend any conspiracy against the CPEC.

China Pakistan Economic Corridor project is a signature project of Pak-China friendship with over 60 billion dollars investment. It is a project of regional connectivity and will be helpful in connectivity of Pakistani products to the international markets. This game changer project has the ability to bring an economic revolution in the country. The outsourcing will be done by China in the special economic zones. This is a fact that CPEC added a new dimension to Pakistan-China all-weather strategic cooperative partnership, which was based on mutual understanding and respect.

New European Political Community could be a key forum

Andrew Hammond

The new European Political Community met for the first time on Thursday amid massive shared challenges. Despite the high hopes for its future against the backdrop of the Ukraine crisis, it is unclear whether the formation of this new "club of nations" will be a significant moment in the story of Europe's long integration project or little more than a footnote in its history.

The formation of the forum, which has been heavily promoted by French President Emmanuel Macron, highlights the critical policy debates taking place over the role of the EU in a more complex, multipolar Europe and world. This issue has become especially important given Russia's hostility in recent years, culminating in the invasion of Ukraine in February.

It is in this context that EU decision-makers are thinking about whether and how European and Eurasian states that are not members of the 27-strong EU club can best develop their political and economic ties with Brussels. A total of 44 states were invited to Thursday's big meeting, including 17 non-EU powers like the UK, Norway, Switzerland, Ukraine, Iceland, Turkey and Azerbaijan.

With so many disparate states at the table, the European Political Community has generated high hopes, but its purpose is far from clear and some doubt that it will last. While the new body's mission is not obvious, the expectation is that it might convene once or twice a year and aim to address issues that preoccupy all the states in question, including pressing energy, security and immigration challenges.

A key aim for the big EU players is to embrace accession countries, some of which are losing patience waiting for membership of the bloc. In doing so, they seek to counter attempts by Russia and China to gain influence in the continent, especially on its southern and eastern fringes.

One of the other drivers of the new group is Brexit, given that this development created a new non-EU power in Western Europe. This is already changing the EU's relationship with other non-EU European countries, including Norway, Switzerland, Turkey, Liechtenstein and those in the Balkans.

Each of these states has developed relations with the EU that — most obviously in the case of Norway and Switzerland, but also to a lesser extent others like Turkey — were intended as a means to the end of eventual EU membership, or at least closer relations with the bloc. Brexit has not (yet) thrown these processes into reverse, with eventual accession remaining an option, but it does open up new possibilities for future relationships centered on continued non-membership.

Decision-makers in these states have used the Brexit vote as an opportunity to raise questions about the future of their relations with the EU. There has been some limited discussion as to whether Brexit might open up opportunities for a radical overhaul of Europe's institutional architecture. Such ambitious plans have faded, but they do point to opportunities for change, potentially via the new community.

For advocates such as Macron, this forum could serve as a bridge to a larger EU and a framework for more permanent continental integration. It could start this process by building a consensus between participating states and the EU.

Take the example of energy, on which cooperative frameworks could be developed where there is, for instance, a possibility of connecting Ukraine to the European electricity grid, signing more natural gas agreements with Norway, and building green hydrogen infrastructure across the region. Another example is security and defense partnerships, as the war in Ukraine has exposed the weakness of Europe's existing architecture and highlighted the need for European countries to cooperate more, including in areas like counterterrorism and cybersecurity.

Such reforms may also be needed to deal with wider global trends impacting the region. Europe already feels the pull of different world powers, especially the US and China, and it struggles locally with the geopolitical disruptions of Russia. This global multipolarity has brought greater uncertainty to Europe, with the geopolitical terrain becoming all the more complex.

Going forward, at least three states in particular will be crucial to shaping how Europe's changing geopolitical landscape and the fast-changing multipolar world play out for the EU: Germany, the US and Russia. Other powers such as France, the UK and China will have influence, but it will probably be the choices of the first three — whether to engage, exploit or ignore — that will shape the context of European and international politics in the short and medium term.

What these debates showcase is that the EU, and the wider community of European nations, face several first-order challenges that include the ongoing pressures facing relations with Russia. How Brussels, in particular, now responds will not just frame its future relationship with key non-EU states, including the UK, but also determine its wider place in the world.

US 'commitment' to Asia is self-interested

Tom Fowdy

Since 2018, the foreign policy of the U.S. has shifted to try and contain the rise of China. In doing so, the U.S. has pursued measures across various fronts, including increasing economic protectionism at home and launching a technology war against China's key industries. In doing so, the U.S. aims to build multiple interlocking coalitions to isolate Beijing.

To achieve its goals, the Biden administration is seeking to avoid the commitment and compromise of multilateralism by building small coalitions of countries to fortify U.S. interests on given issues. For example, one such coalition is the AUKUS military partnership (between Australia, the United Kingdom and the United States). Another is the "Indo-Pacific Economic Framework" (IPEF), which the U.S. established earlier this year to counter China's economic influence in East Asia. Its purpose is to allow Washington to "shape the rules" and isolate Beijing from supply chains in areas of American preference.

There is, of course, an obvious flaw in IPEF: The U.S. is using it to impose its vision and demands on participating countries but fails to provide any real incentives or substantial benefits. It does not offer any form of market access whatsoever, let alone pledge any investment. This is because American domestic politics are centered around a new consensus of protectionism, formulated by the Trump administration under the slogan of "America First."

The logic of America First is unilateral, and American jobs and industries are the priority. The formulation of the IPEF is motivated by the strategic need to contain China, but otherwise restrained by the reality that the U.S. cannot cede its protectionist outlook. The structural reasons behind this uncertain outlook are solely hegemonic and not for the benefit of American allies. It is a massive contradiction in the IPEF.

U.S. protectionist policies are undermining the exports of allies, which has been one growing point of tension between the U.S. and South Korea.

For example, the Inflation Reduction Act — the Congressional bill addressing climate change — discriminates against all overseas manufacturers of electric vehicles, even those in South Korea, one of its closest allies.

This has led to denunciation of U.S. policies in several South Korean newspapers, with the Hankyoreh stating that the U.S. "is morphing from a guardian of free trade into a disrupter of international trade norms." The Joon-gang Ilbo noted that U.S. President Joe Biden's "Build Back Better" is no different from former U.S. President Donald Trump's "Make America Great Again."

The IPEF demands its participants follow American strategic and economic preferences but offers nothing in return. Meanwhile, U.S. domestic protectionist policies also negatively impact its members.

This means that the so-called U.S. "commitment" to Asia is superficial, self-interested and short-sighted. The IPEF risks imposing costs on its members but offers no benefits. It is neither a trading bloc nor an investment treaty. It even does not have any funding. Despite U.S. efforts to roll back globalization, other countries won't be easy to convince.

ADIB Amwali sees rapid growth in first year of its operation

Completed one year milestone with over 8,000 active accounts

DUBAI: Abu Dhabi Islamic Bank (ADIB), a leading Islamic financial institution, reported significant growth achieved by 'Amwali' in the first year of its operation. The world's first Islamic digital bank account gained high traction with 27 per cent month-over-month growth over 12 months.

With over 8,000 total accounts opened since August 2021, ADIB's Amwali aims to address the gap in a demographic that has been largely underserved in the region. Currently, 74 per cent of customers are Emiratis with a ratio of 61 per cent male, 39 per cent female. In addition, 54 per cent of accounts are in the age group between 15 - 18 years.

When Amwali was first introduced in August 2021, it was intended to empower youth to develop financial management skills early in life. Over the past year, ADIB witnessed that youth are inclined towards acquiring the knowledge and skills to build responsible financial behaviour and make informed financial decisions. Amwali enables them to practice sound money management at a young age while building their financial literacy in the process.

Amwali provides tailored banking experience for target customers' segments with a plethora of niche features including receiving money from parents and family, tracking balance and spending, creating saving goals, paying friends, and more. Customers of Amwali receive a debit card to use for day-to-day shopping, online payments, cash withdrawals, and can even add it to Apple Pay and enjoy exclusive offers on fashion, electronics, gaming, entertainment, online shopping and more to help them grow into financially smart and successful adults.

In line with its digital transformation strategy, ADIB has constantly been enhancing the digital banking experience for the new generation of customers and introduced an AI chat bot for "Amwali" last year. It provides users with services such as balance inquiries, fund transfers, and transaction history via automated responses.

Since its launch, Amwali has been getting a lot of traction among young people and is adding more customers, while maintaining a high retention rate of Amwali users. ADIB recently received the "Outstanding Innovation in Mobile Banking" award from Global Finance for Amwali and its mobile banking app. The digital bank account recorded approximately 800,000 transactions as of August 2022.

Fintech developments could spur growth in zakat

DUBAI: Developments in fintech can significantly contribute to growth in the annual financial value of zakat, in addition to voluntary giving such as sadaqah donations and waqf endowments, according to a survey from IslamicMarkets.com.

The research conducted among Islamic fintech professionals revealed that 84% of respondents believe that the annual financial value of zakat, as well as voluntary giving such as sadaqah donations and waqf endowments will increase over the next five years, with 33% expecting a dramatic increase.

IslamicMarkets.com provides access to expert knowledge and financial opportunities, to support the Global Islamic Finance Forum 2022 (GIFF2022), 5-6 October in Kuala Lumpur.

firms and digitalisation of financial services as the key contributor to expansion of voluntary giving ahead of improved transparency around zakat, sadaqah and waqf.

"Digitalisation and the rise of fintechs are central to the expansion of Islamic finance, but as the research shows, it can also benefit zakat and voluntary giving in general," GIFF2022 Chairman Arsalan Ahmed said.

IsDB Group provides $165.63b to finance development projects

JEDDAH: Dr. Muhammad Sulaiman Al Jasser, Chairman of the Islamic Development Bank (IsDB) Group, has said that his group has provided US$165.630.5 billion to finance development projects in various economic sectors, since its launch and up to 30th June, 2022.

In an interview with the Emirates News Agency (WAM), Dr. Al Jasser said that food security is a major issue facing the member states of the IsDB, which is promoting smart agriculture and the need to increase strategic food reserves in these countries.

By 2025, the bank hopes to make at least 35 percent of its new operations environmentally friendly, and it is cooperating with the UAE by offering technical support to ensure the success of the 28th United Nations Climate Change Conference of the Parties (COP28), which it is also currently doing with Egypt for COP27, to be held in Sharm El Sheikh.

This cooperation will enable the bank to help transfer the UAE's pioneering and advanced digitisation expertise to its other member states through its "Reverse Linkage" mechanism, which aims to promote the exchange of knowledge and experiences.

He thanked WAM for giving him this opportunity to speak about IsDB's activities and development-related issues and challenges. He talked about the close relationship between the IsDB and the UAE, which is one of the bank's founding countries and a major stakeholder.

What are your support mechanisms for member states that enable them to address current economic challenges?

The bank's main goal is to support the social and economic development of its member countries, and its strategic objectives revolve around this mission and are reflected by its financing of many major projects in various sectors, such as agriculture, healthcare, education, transportation, energy, industry, mining, urban development, water and sanitation, information and communication technology, digitalisation and finance.

The bank has also financed various projects over the past years, including those empowering women and the youth, countering climate change, supporting non-governmental organisations (NGOs) and civil society groups, facilitating the exchange of knowledge and expertise and regional cooperation, and encouraging economic integration among member countries.

The need to maintain food security was made more urgent by the COVID-19 pandemic and the conflict in Eastern Europe. What related measures has the IsDB implemented as a response to the urgent needs of its member states?

Maintaining food security is a key challenge facing most IsDB's member states, especially low-income countries suffering from food shortages and weak supply chains, while simultaneously depending on imports. The conflict in Eastern European and the drought that hit Eastern Africa are also causes of recent food price hikes.

In response to these challenges, in July 2022, the IsDB adopted a comprehensive food security response programme worth US$10.54 billion to support member states in addressing the food crisis. The bank is also assisting the efforts to increase the resilience of its member states against future food crises.

Therefore, the bank will focus on supporting eco-friendly smart agriculture that will increase productivity, ensure food security and maintain the strategic food reserves of its member states, as well as enable small farmers to access markets and attract agricultural investment.

In November 2023, the UAE will host COP28. Can you tell us about the details of your cooperation with the UAE and what are your target sectors?

The bank is proactively adopting green economy and sustainability standards in its financial operations, so it set a target of having least 35 percent of its new operations as climate-sensitive by 2025, meaning that it will concurrently assess the need to adapt to and mitigate the effects of climate change.

Under its plan to address climate change and its repercussions, the bank launched a leading Shariah-compliant financing programme, titled, "Green Sukuk", with the aim of encouraging the adoption of green projects and reducing the negative effects of other developmental projects on the climate.

Digitisation is crucial to a variety of sectors. What is the bank's strategy for supporting member states in this area?

The IsDB is currently updating its strategy to ensure that its activities are in line with the ever-changing requirements of its member countries, by prioritising their efforts to achieve recovery and build resilience.

The bank is also helping its member countries make their healthcare systems more inclusive and sustainable, as well as bridge the digital divide, preventing some half a billion children from continuing their education during the COVID-19 pandemic. It is also supporting the digitisation of various economic and governmental sectors in its member countries.

Through its Reverse Linkage mechanism, the bank can help spread the UAE's advanced expertise in this area to other member states. What are the effects of the digital economy and virtual economy on the real economy?

The technological advancements of recent decades led to the Fourth Industrial Revolution based on digitalisation and AI. The major effects on the real economy can be summarised in two words, acceleration and temporary confusion.

Innovation accelerates growth and creates major opportunities, especially in the services sector and with high added value. On the other hand, the rapid adoption of new innovations has led to the restructuring of the labour market and changed priorities, due to the urgent need to train and qualify human capital and re-organise to keep pace with these new innovations.

During its previous meeting, the IsDB's Board of Executive Directors agreed to provide funds worth US$1.12 billion for development projects in its member states. What are the features of these projects?

The IsDB's Board of Executive Directors approved funds to finance development projects valued at US$1.12 billion, which will cover many key sectors and infrastructure projects, include those in the areas of food security, health, transportation, energy, urban development, education, and water and sanitation.

These projects will improve the living standards of target categories in member countries, as well as support their economic growth. The board also approved an aid package worth US$1.79 million to finance other projects, including facilitating market access in Yemen, as well as special aid for Muslim communities in three non-member countries earmarked for upgrading school facilities and offering quality education and skills training to young people to encourage their economic and social participation.

What is the total value of financing provided by the IsDB to member states up to the end of the first quarter of 2022? Since its launch and up to 30th June, 2022, the IsDB has provided US$165.630.5 billion to finance development projects in various economic sectors.

The Islamic Corporation for the Insurance of Investment and Export Credit, the insurance arm of the IsDB Group, has insured trade and investment operations in its 48 member countries for US$83.3 billion.

To mitigate the risks facing these operations, the corporation offers insurance solutions and services that comply with the Islamic Sharia.

How many regional offices does the bank have? And what are their roles? In order to provide fast and flexible solutions to assist the development of member countries, the IsDB has been keen to decentralise.

To create opportunities for communication and coordination and facilitate the implementation of the IsDB Group's projects, it responded to the request of some member countries for local representation.

It established 10 regional centres in some member states, in addition to the Centre of Excellence in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, while a new regional centre is being constructed in the UAE. The bank's regional centres enable it to better meet the needs of member states while improving performance and increasing efficiency.

Decentralisation will accelerate the implementation of the group's projects and reduce costs, as well as enable its regional offices to promote communication among the general public, provide news to the media and coordinate with them, and cooperate with the business sector.

Minister for pushing national productivity to ensure export-led growth

Ahsan says country had been facing sheer foreign exchange reserves and balance of payment crisis for long time

Staff Reporter

ISLAMABAD: Minister for Planning and Development Ahsan Iqbal on Thursday said that Pakistan desperately needed measures to bring the country's economy out of crisis through sustainable export led economic growth. "The sustainable economic growth is possible only through increasing productivity that leads to more exports and higher economic growth", the minister said while addressing the closing ceremony of a two-day international conference on Productivity Accreditation and Certification, organized by National Productivity Organization (NPO) on the occasion of APO's Diamond Jubilee.

Ahsan Iqbal said the country had been facing sheer foreign exchange reserves and balance of payment crisis for long time due to slow growth in exports. "Whenever we cross 6 percent of GDP growth, the government faces dollar shortage issue due to which we have to put emergency brake on the economic growth to resolve the balance of payment crisis," he added.

Ahsan Iqbal, Minister for Planning, Development and Special Initiatives in his closing speech appreciated APO's role in the development of Asia-Pacific region. He further deliberated that it is time to renew and revitalize our commitment, resolve and will to strive further and achieve APO's vision of "Inclusive, innovation-led productivity growth in the Asia-Pacific".

Together with this vigor and energy our goals as APO member countries of "Sustainable productivity growth", "Robust innovation ecosystem" and "Inclusive engagement and shared prosperity" seem not too distant.

He conveyed his gratitude to APO Secretary General on APO's Diamond Jubilee. He further added that working in tandem with similar organizations, the APO and NPOs will be able to find solutions to long-standing problems of the region.

He expressed these views while addressing closing ceremony of International Conference on Productivity Accreditation and Certification for Pakistan on Tuesday. This International Conference on Productivity Accreditation and Certification held in Pakistan was the continuation of the commemoration of the APO's Diamond Jubilee.

He highlighted that the Ministry of planning development and special initiatives, own's a mission to "manage Pakistan's socio-economic development in a strategic and sustainable manner".

Australian HC expresses his willingness to facilitate promotion of business-to-business linkages

Our Correspondent

KARACHI: In a statement, Irfan Iqbal Sheikh, President FPCCI, has expressed his concerns that the bilateral trade with a large economy like Australia - having a GDP of approximately $1.4 trillion - remains far below its potential as total trade with Australia is under one billion dollars; and, on top of that, trade deficit with Australia is approximately $400 million. For any head of FPCCI, it must be a cause of deep consternations and IT & textiles are the two industries which have the potential to exponentially enhance Pakistani exports to Australia, he added.

Mian Anjum Nisar, former President FPCCI, emphasized that managing national food security and efficient agricultural yield per acre are the areas where Pakistan needs to learn and adapt from Australian experiences: their agricultural technologies; protecting crops from natural hazards; their water management practices; crop-mapping; fields-to-market roads & networks; export marketing of agricultural products and state-of-the-art food processing facilities.

Neil Hawkins, Australian High Commissioner in Pakistan, expressed his willing-

Australia name squad to face England

SYDNEY: Australia will continue to rotate their players as they search for the best combination to defend their ICC Men's T20 World Cup title on home soil.

A host of experienced players will skip the first match of Australia's vital three-game series against England in Perth on Sunday and re-join the squad for the second clash against their old rival in Canberra on October 12.

Adam Zampa, Mitchell Starc, Josh Hazlewood, Pat Cummins and Glenn Maxwell will miss the series opener against England and will instead stay on the east coast of Australia following the second game of their ongoing series against the West Indies, before joining up with the remainder of the squad in Canberra.

It means Marcus Stoinis, Kane

Richardson, Ashton Agar, Mitchell Swebson and Nathan Ellis are all recalled for the series against England and are likely to feature in Perth, while emerging all-rounder Cameron Green will once again get the chance to further push his T20 World Cup credentials after he was also named to take on the Ashes rival.

Green is not currently in Australia's 15-player squad for the T20 World Cup, but teams have until October 9 to make changes to their squad without requiring a medical reason.

The 23-year-old could also still feature given Stoinis has been battling a side injury and will need to prove his fitness against England, while Marsh only just returned to Australia's side despite not being able to bowl.

It leaves Australia with plenty of options ahead of their T20 World Cup defence and chair of selectors George Bailey said it was vital for his team to be fresh heading into the four-week event that starts later this month.

"The high-performance team and selectors have planned these matches to ensure our squad get to the World Cup fresh and ready to perform," Bailey said.

South Africa all-rounder ruled out of T20 World Cup

ISLAMABAD: South Africa all-rounder Dwaine Pretorius has been ruled out of the ODIs against India and the ICC Men's T20 World Cup in Australia.

A fracture on his left thumb has ruled Pretorius out of the ODIs against India and the upcoming ICC Men's T20 World Cup 2022. Pretorius, who was the joint-highest wicket-taker for South Africa in the T20 World Cup last year, has been an integral part of their plans in this format.

Pretorius has featured in eight T20Is so far in 2022, taking 12 wickets at an average of 20.66 and most importantly, scoring quick runs with the bat down the order.

"The nature of the injury requires surgical intervention and Dwaine will consult the Cricket South Africa designated hand surgeon on arrival in South Africa," CSA chief medical officer Dr Shuaib Manjra said. "Normal rehabilitation procedures will follow to ensure he speedily returns to playing cricket."

Pretorius copped the injury during the third T20I against India on Tuesday in Indore. Marco Jansen and Andile Phehlukwayo are the all-rounders named in the reserves for the T20 World Cup, and one of them will likely replace Pretorius in the squad for Australia.

Pretorius is the second key player from South Africa to miss the T20 World Cup, middle-order batter Rassie van der Dussen was ruled out with a finger injury last month.

Alonso named new Bayer Leverkusen coach

BERLIN: Former Liverpool and Real Madrid midfielder Xabi Alonso has been named as Bayer Leverkusen's new coach, replacing Gerardo Seoane after he was dismissed by the Bundesliga club on Wednesday.

Alonso, 40, has signed a deal until June 2024. In his first coaching job at the top level he takes over a team second from bottom after eight matches of the German season. "I know Leverkusen as an excellent club from my time in Germany," said Alonso, who spent the final three years of his playing career with Bayern Munich. "Bayer has always had great players. I also see a lot of quality in the current squad. This task excites me a lot."

As a player, Alonso won the 2010 World Cup and two European Championships with Spain. He also lifted the Champions League trophy with both Liverpool and Madrid.

Alonso scored the equaliser in the 2005 Champions League final for Liverpool to take the game to extra time, with the Reds eventually beating AC Milan on penalties.

He managed Real Sociedad's reserve team in his home Basque region for three years until May, seeing them promoted to Spain's second tier for the first time in 60 years, before they were relegated at the end of last season. "With Xabi Alonso, we have signed a coach who was an absolute world-class professional as a player, an intelligent strategist and extremely successful in no less than three of the most demanding European leagues," said Leverkusen sporting director Simon Rolfes.

Leverkusen confirmed the departure of Seoane in the wake of Tuesday's 2-0 loss at Porto in the Champions League. Despite guiding the side to Champions League football with a third-placed finish last season, Leverkusen had struggled badly under the Swiss coach this campaign.

They were eliminated by third-tier SV Elversberg in the first round of the German Cup and have won just once in the Bundesliga. Leverkusen chief executive Fernando Carro said on Sunday he wanted "quick results" from Seoane, whose side were thrashed 4-0 by Bayern Munich on Friday.

Former Chelsea coach Thomas Tuchel, along with Adi Huetter and Domenico Tedesco had been rumoured as possible replacements for Seoane. Alonso finished his career at Bayern in 2017, having won the Bundesliga in each of his three seasons there. He had previously been heavily linked with the coaching position at Borussia Moenchengladbach in March of 2021, but signed a one-year extension in Spain. Alonso's first match in charge of Leverkusen will be against Schalke in the Bundesliga on Saturday.
