Pakistan urgently needs significant investments in climate resilience

Spokesman Report

ISLAMABAD: Climate change-induced disasters could significantly set back Pakistan's development ambitions and its ability to reduce poverty. To foster people-centric climate adaptation and resilience, the country needs fundamental shifts in its development path and policies, requiring substantial investments including international support, according to the World Bank Group's Country Climate and Development Report (CCDR) for Pakistan released today.

This year's climate change-induced heat wave followed by devastating and unprecedented floods have caused more than 1,700 deaths and displaced more than 8 million people.

The destructive effects on infrastructure, assets, crops, and livestock have also been massive, with over 33 million people affected across the country and more than $30 billion in damages and economic losses.

The report notes that the combined risks of extreme climate-related events, environmental degradation, and air pollution are projected to reduce Pakistan's GDP by at least 18 to 20% by 2050. This will stall progress on economic development and poverty reduction.

"The recent flooding and humanitarian crisis provide a wake-up call for urgent action to prevent further devastation to the people of Pakistan and its economy due to climate change," said Martin Raiser, World Bank Vice President for South Asia. "Accelerated climate actions can protect the economy from shocks and secure more sustainable and inclusive growth in Pakistan."

The report recommends five priority transitions to adapt to climate change: transform the agri-food system; build resilient and livable cities; accelerate a just transition to sustainable energy and low-carbon transport; strengthen human capital to achieve sustained and equitable development and climate resilience; and align financing policies, incentives, and institutions to support the scale-up of climate actions.

To implement a climate-resilient and low-carbon development pathway, estimates of total investment needs up to 2030 amount to over 10% of the cumulative GDP for the period. The report recommends accelerating the reforms to expand domestic revenue mobilization, including by raising new municipal and property taxes to finance urban investments. It highlights the importance of improving efficiency and targeting of subsidies for agriculture and energy while protecting the most vulnerable. Yet, even ambitious increases in fiscal resources over the coming years will not be enough for Pakistan to finance all the needed investments, so significant international support and private investment will be essential.

"If we want to tackle climate change, we need to prioritize investing in adaptation to help prepare Pakistan for future climate-related calamities, which are growing in frequency and intensity," said Hela Cheikhrouhou, IFC Regional Vice President for Middle East, Central Asia, Türkiye, Afghanistan and Pakistan. "With the right policy frameworks, Pakistan has the opportunity to attract private investment to build its resilience, particularly in sectors such as water management, agriculture, urban infrastructure, municipal services, and housing." Pakistan is not a significant contributor to global warming, but it is on a high-growth trajectory of carbon emissions linked to fossil fuel use. This is also a source of the country's chronic fiscal stress and worsening air pollution. Therefore, climate actions that bring co-benefits to both adaptation and mitigation and contribute to improving development outcomes should have the highest priority.

"Foreign private capital can play an important role in addressing the climate change challenges in Pakistan," said Ethiopia Tafara, MIGA Vice President and Chief Risk, Legal and Administrative Officer. "Sustaining flows of foreign direct investment that support climate mitigation and adaptation will contribute toward financing Pakistan's low-carbon transition."

Only int'l sections can make India answerable: Mushaal

Urges UNHRC to suspend India's membership for continued HR violations in IIOJK

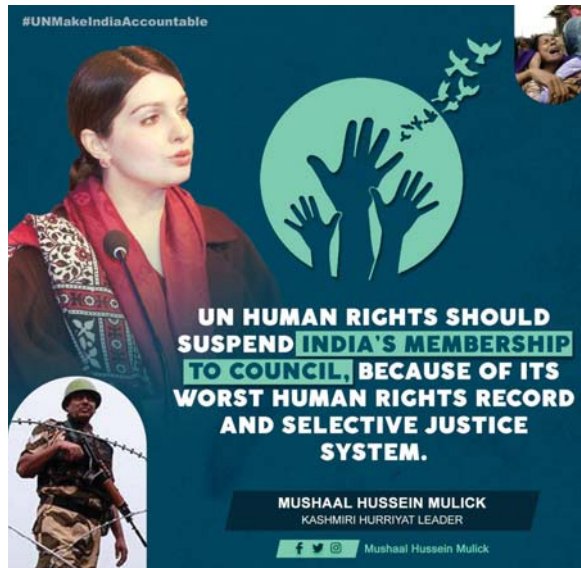

Spokesman Report

ISLAMABAD: Mushaal Mullick Chairperson Peace and Culture Organisation demanded that UN human rights council (UNHRC) should suspend India's membership to the council, for its failure to address the key human rights concerns expressed by United Nations and the OIC during third Universal Periodic Review (UPR).

Mushaal, wife of senior hurriyat leader Yasin Malik, in a statement on Thursday said that only international sections can make India answerable.

Despite strong protests from human rights organizations including the United Nations and the OIC, the Indian Government has failed to address the key human rights concerns expressed during third UPR, she added.

She appreciated over two hundred civil society groups for raising concerns over the worsening situation in IIOJK and the world should take steps to resolve the Kashmir dispute as per the wishes of the people of Kashmir.

Mushaal further said that the Narandra Modi led Indian government crossed all limits of brutalities and fascism; hence the world powers and human rights organizations should have to come forwards to stop the ongoing genocide and ethnic cleansing of Kashmiri people.

She said that the Indian government was violating all international norms, conventions, and obligations in the occupied valley with complete impunity sans any fear from the world powers because of their common commercial interests as Indian being the largest business center.

The hurriyat leader went on to say that India was miss-using anti-terror laws against people of political dissent, human rights defenders and journalist, demanding the rights watchdogs to join their hands to hold the Indian government accountable and ask the government to address key human rights issues that have been neglected for too long.

Mushaal said that the world powers and UN bodies should press Indian government to reverse 5TH August unlawful action, because it was not only in sheer violation of the spirit of the Geneva conventions but also against UNSC resolutions on Kashmir.

She stated that colonial-era tactics such as criminalizing freedom of expression and opinion, reprisals against human rights defenders and civil society activists were being used as a tool to suppress the voices of dissent in the occupied valley. The Chairperson appealed that the international community should press the fascist Indian government to repeal all draconian laws, release political prisoners, and human rights defenders and give access to the UN special rapporteur and other mandate holders to IIOJK to assess the situation on the ground.

Saidpur Village: A wide array of religious and cultural heritage

Ghaania Usman

Saidpur Village is a major tourist destination located in Islamabad. It hosts a wide array of religious and cultural heritage. The area was inhabited by Muslims, Hindus, and Sikhs before 1947. The village land was acquired by the Capital Development Authority (CDA) in the late '70s. The major historical buildings on site are a Mandir, a Sikh temple, and a Dharamshala. During 2006-2008, the village went through a major renovation, with the aim of making Saidpur a "Model Tourist Village". It is important to appreciate that this renovation played a major role in developing Saidpur village. It is now a highly popular tourist spot that has received visits from many officials such as the Prime Minister, Army Chief, and various other delegates and foreign diplomats.

In recent years, there is not sufficient attention being given to tourist spots that hold great significance. Sites that hold religious importance for minority groups often suffer from a lack of correct resources or enough funds and recognition from the government. Saidpur Village is one of these sites. The area has not been properly restored for a while and remains poverty-ridden where locals lack access to jobs.

The natural beauty of Saidpur village serves as a major source of attraction for tourists. The site is situated on the slope of Margalla hills in the midst of a lot of greenery. Due to the rapid increase in the population of the area, this natural beauty is slowly being lost. Large-scale deforestation is being carried out to meet the energy needs of the increasing population. As a result, air pollution has increased and the quality of life has declined. This environmental harm has caused the natural appeal of the area for tourists to be damaged.

The renovation of Saidpur Village in 2006-2008 played a significant role in making it a highly visited tourist destination. However, since then the village has not been through any renovation or restoration. The majority of the population lacks access to basic utilities such as electricity, water, and gas. Such utilities remain restricted to only a percentage of the population. Other infrastructural problems include a lack of furniture to accommodate old or immobilized people.

Pottery shops are a major source of attraction and an integral part of the local culture. Many people used to make earnings through local arts and crafts shops. Some of this pottery is from pre-partition times and holds great historical importance. These shops have been pushed far away from the tourist attractions. Here, they lack a sufficient amount of space to display pottery items such as mechanical clay trains and fountains. Shop owners need more exposed spaces that are accessible to tourists.

Saidpur Village was a place of fusion of three different cultures. Hindus, Muslims, and Sikhs lived together in the area which is reflected in the living styles of the people. Even now, Saidpur Village receives a diverse range of tourists. However, there is a lack of facilities to accommodate Hindu and Sikh tourists, despite the major attractions being specific to their culture. Tour guides do not have enough information on the religious context of these sites. They also do not have access to scriptures that might be relevant to the area. There is a language barrier between the tourists and tour guides.

To deal with these issues, local officials have asked for more government support and management. This is required to bring the cultural, religious, and historical significance of Saidpur Village to the forefront. Through investing in higher advertisements to increase awareness, the site will be able to receive even more tourists than it already does, thus bringing greater returns.

Furthermore, there is a large bakramandi outside the entrance of the village, situated next to a primary school. This has been constructed illegally without any permits. According to locals, the mandi gives a bad impression of the village to tourists and international delegations. Waste is dumped right next to the entrance of the area which causes a putrid smell to develop. This encroachment problem should be looked into and it must be ensured that the locals who have been residing in this area before the creation of Islamabad are accommodated. Locals recommend the imposition of stronger fines and stricter government enforcement of the law.

Afforestation is required to preserve the natural beauty of the area. Systems for protecting newly planted trees and preventing deforestation are also necessary. To deal with encroachment and the resulting pollution, there should be great government management and stronger fines for those who cut down trees or seize land from surrounding areas of the village.

In regard to infrastructural issues, there is a dire need to ensure the provision of basic utilities. Sewage and sanitation systems need to be improved and developed. Pottery shops and arts and crafts shops should be maintained and given more open exposed spaces. More funding also needs to be given for the maintenance of the historical sites.

For more religious tolerance and inclusion, the training of local officials is necessary to allow better accommodation for tourists from different religious and cultural backgrounds. Not only should the existing tour guides be properly informed, but individuals who belong to the relevant religions should be appointed as tour guides.

Alongside this, it is required for the government to aid more towards supporting the locals that live in this area. There is a need for ensuring a higher standard of living and stable income for households. The rapidly increasing population is proving to create immense overcrowding.

Next to this, since the youth of this village is very well-educated and literate, the government should look into providing employment for them. Those with arts and crafts or pottery shops should also be looked after to stabilize their income and also to create greater appeal for tourists.

With these measures taken, Saidpur Village will be able to reach its full potential and create great economic growth for our country.

Pakistan using CIIIE platform to expand trade with China, World

Pakistan is using the platform of China International Import Expo (CIIIE) to expand trade with China and the world.

"Using this platform of China International Import Expo, we are working together to expand trade with China and also the world," noted Moin ul Haque, Pakistan's Ambassador to China.

Scheduled from November 5 to 10, the 5th China International Import Expo (CIIIE) provides a platform for companies from around the world to display their products, promote their brands, and find more business partners in the world's second-largest economy. It witnessed an active engagement of Pakistani officials, experts, merchants and so on.

Pakistani media representative attended the first CIIIE back in 2018. As he sees it, the initiative of the import expo launched by China was a new phase of economic opening up. The unique idea of CIIIE also successfully gathered international business delegates and global companies to exhibit their products for an efficient and smooth launch in the 2nd largest economy in the world.

"The significant attendance of international business community and international organization generated a message for the global community, that is, yes China is open and is welcoming all to export their products in world's largest market of consumers," he told CEN.

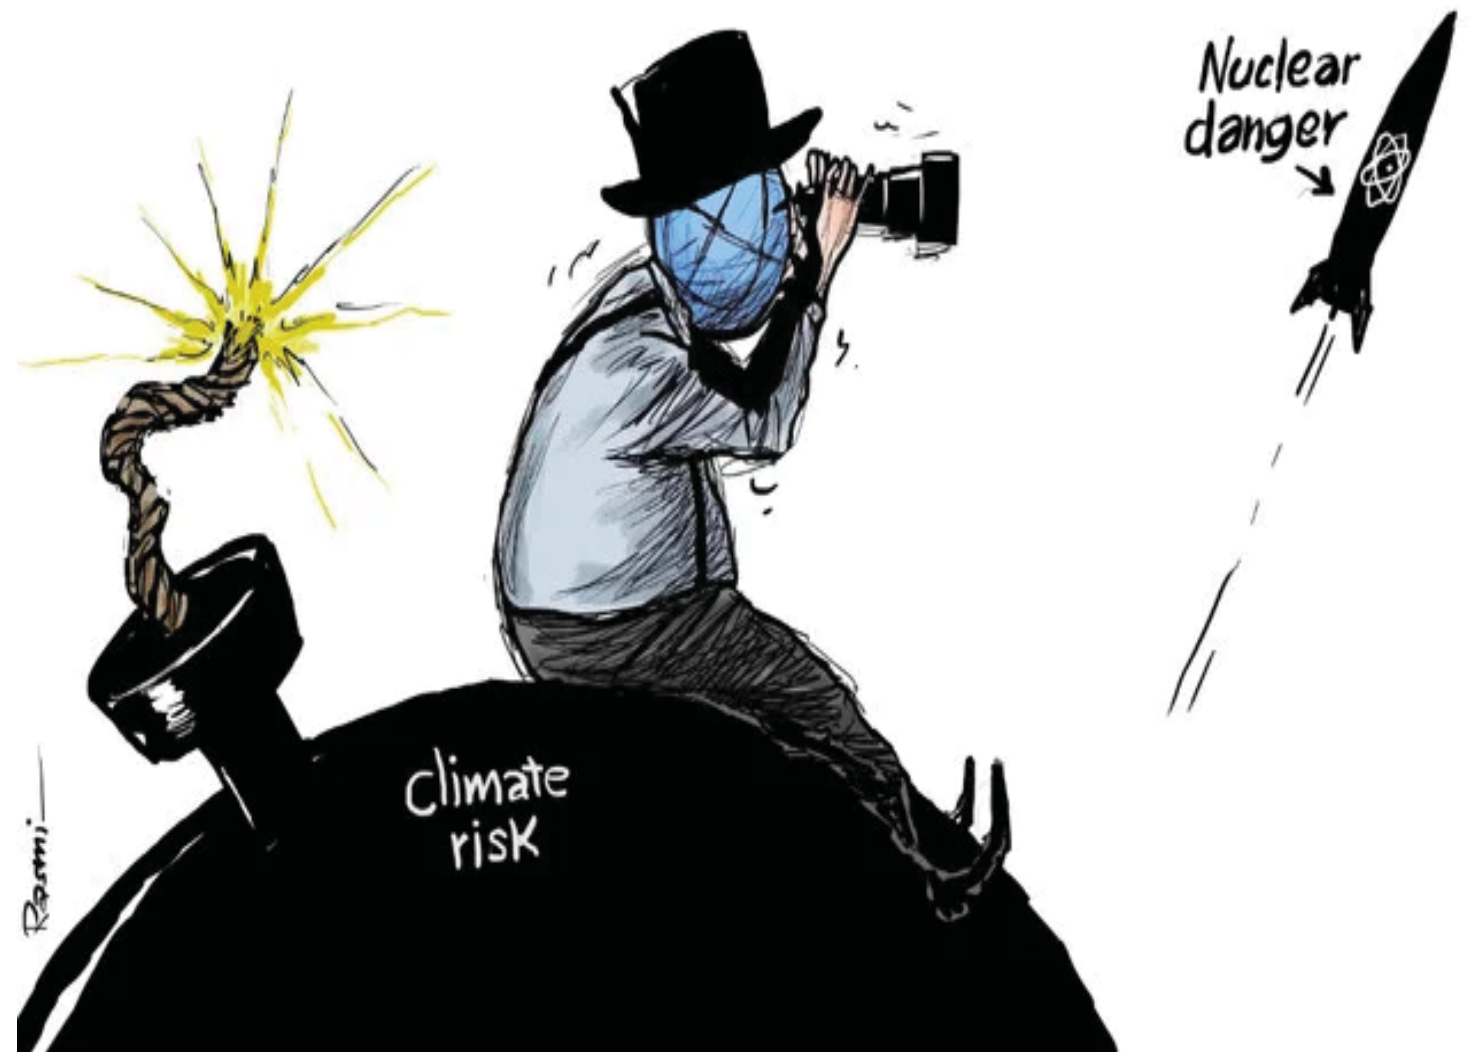

Pakistani traders in sectors of agriculture, leather, biscuit products, confectionery items, seafood, woven fabric, minerals, cutlery and dates, sports goods, dry fruits, garments, furniture, jewellery, and precious stones have been making a good presence in the Chinese market by using the CIIIE platform.

"We also welcome Chinese firms to invest in Pakistan," said Ghulam Qadir, Commercial Counsellor of the Embassy of Pakistan in China, adding "There is so much to be done, and we are looking forward to it."

Since 2018, CIIIE has been providing consistent advantages to the Pakistani business community to attract and develop trade relationships with the Chinese market.

Courtesy of the booming Sino-Pak trade and investment cooperation coupled with important platforms such as CIIIE, Pakistan's overall export to China has registered steady growth in recent years.

The increasing presence of Pakistani products in the Chinese market "will definitely help the south Asian country narrow trade deficit with China and explore the Chinese market to their advantage," the representative said.

The massacre of Khuhra mosque

Asadullah Mahesar

Makhdoom Abdul Rehman Shaheed was one of the pious and God-loving men of Sindh. He was a renowned spiritual guide as well as a religious scholar of Khuhra town, district Khairpur, Sindh. When his famousness spread among the masses and people of near and far were attracted to his circle, the then ruler of that time, Mian Noor Muhammad Kalhoro, dreaded of overtaking of Makhdoom. But Makhdoom did not have such intention to rebel against the ruler. The Kalhoro family, the native rulers of Sindh, get hold of political power either based on righteousness or in the name of religion. However, they were not the chieftain of such a remarkable clan or tribe. Hence, they had always worried about the growing influence of God-fearing men like Shah Inayat Shaheed and Makhdoom Abdul Rehman who publicly identified the unlawful deeds and exercises of rulers. Thus, Mian Noor Muhammad Kalhoro expected an opportunity to put down the dread of Makhdoom.

Once upon a time, a devotee of Makhdoom made a complaint to his master about a Sayyid of Rohri who used to harass his wife. Makhdoom accepted the request and wrote to the Sayyids of Rohri to avert their man from such cruel deeds to assist the destitute people. Moreover, Makhdoom went to Khudabad, the then capital of Sindh, at the request of the oppressor and warned Mian Noor Muhammad boldly to control his rambler men. Besides, the Sayyids of Rohri had patronage by the rulers resultantly they did not recant from such immodest deeds.

Therefore, Makhdoom dispatched the Makhdoom along with his followers gathered in the mosque to pray Zuhur Namaz (mid-day prayer). It was the last prayer of a God-fearing man (Makhdoom) and his all 222 followers, who were present in the mosque, were cruelly martyred there by the force of Mian Noor Muhammad Kalhoro.

devotee and his wife to his hometown along with some trusty men. En route, some wanderer Sayyids assailed Makhdoom's men hence, slaughtering took place on both sides in which one of them a Sayyid perished during this confrontation. Thus, the suffering Sayyids complained to the officialdom of Rohri named Moeen Dahar, who was already opposed to Makhdoom consequently he wrote to Mian Noor Muhammad by enticing against Makhdoom. Likewise, Mian Noor Muhammad had already been looking for such opportunity to compress Makhdoom and his growing influence.

Thus, Mian Noor Muhammad sent a huge army of four thousand along with a butcher to Khuhra to revenge for the killing of a Sayyid of Rohri. Thus, Khuhra town was surrounded by the army led by Dawood, a soldier of Kalhoro. As soon as the people heard that the Kalhoro's army had been encircled to Makhdoom then thousands of disciples assembled before Makhdoom to save their master. But Makhdoom refused to take any assistance from his followers to fight against the state and ordered them back to their homes. Makhdoom accentuated to his devotees that they would not resist the force because they had accepted the martyrdom by heart and soul.

Accordingly, Makhdoom along with his followers gathered in the mosque to pray Zuhur Namaz (mid-day prayer). It was the last prayer of a God-fearing man (Makhdoom) and his all 222 followers, who were present in the mosque, were cruelly martyred there by the force of Mian Noor Muhammad Kalhoro. Thus, a huge mass slaughtering of innocent people who were on the way to Truth had been self-sacrificed in the mosque of Makhdoom of Khuhra in the year 1732.

How Arab American politicians can best serve their community

Ray Hanania

Even though we saw a slight increase in the number of Arabs and Muslims who ran for and won office in Tuesday's midterm elections in the US, the key to being effective is not in your ethnicity, religion or nationality. That is a fallacy that many Arab and Muslim candidates take with them when they win elections and serve in public office.

What is really needed is for victorious Arab and Muslim candidates to focus on strengthening their voices and agendas by building coalitions through achieving consensus and compromise with elected officials of other ethnic and religious backgrounds, and even with members of the other political party.

A good example of how an Arab American can fail to achieve results on so-called Arab issues is Michigan congresswoman Rep. Rashida Tlaib. Although she is popular, having won reelection for a third term in office this week, she has not been able to usher in laws that help the Palestinian cause, which she often touts as an important issue. What she does very well is being able to address the needs of the general population of her congressional district, which is more white, Hispanic and African American than Arab or Muslim American. She does a great job pushing through policies that help all of the residents of her district.

But she is not very good at effecting policies for the Palestinians and, because she herself is a Palestinian American, that is a priority expectation for many members of the public. As a Muslim who wears her Palestinian identity on her sleeve, can she get laws passed to help the Palestinian people?

The answer is no. Tlaib can partner with a small number of like-minded members of Congress, but she cannot seem to get other legislators, who may disagree with her on bigger political issues, to co-sponsor her bills. Her introduction in May of a bill recognizing the Palestinian Nakba in Congress was effectively dead on arrival because it had only a handful of co-sponsors, with at least 218 supporters needed for it to become law.

This is a handicap for Palestinian, Arab and Muslim elected officials who want to focus on helping their heritage constituency's foundations. What they need to do is identify needs that can be shared with others and build a coalition, such as what African American Cyril Nichols, a state legislator in Illinois, has done.

Democrat Nichols, who was appointed to represent the 32nd Illinois district last year, won election to his seat on Tuesday by a wide margin. His district includes a slice of Chicagoland's large Arab American, mostly Palestinian, population. After taking his seat in the state legislature, he identified a need that Arab Americans have, which is to receive their share of the contracts Illinois awards to businesses.

To help minority businesses, Illinois has created a Minority Business Enterprise program that sets aside 25 percent of the $46 billion it awards in annual contracts to "designated minorities" who own businesses. Under this scheme, minorities including Blacks, Hispanics, and Asians benefit from contracts worth about $13.5 billion. Nichols has said he wants to include Arabs in the program for the first time.

Japanese envoy inaugurates water supply projects in Faisalabad

Bureau Report

FAISALABAD: Ambassador of Japan to Pakistan WADA Mitsuhiro on Thursday inaugurated two different projects in Faisalabad which would eventually increase daily water supply to the residents and reduce electricity cost for the purpose.

An inaugural ceremony for Japanese grant aid "The Project for Replacement of Pumping Machinery at Inline Booster Pumping Station and Terminal Reservoir in Faisalabad" and groundbreaking ceremony for Japanese grant aid "The Project for the Improvement of Water Treatment Plant and Water Distribution System in Faisalabad" were held with attendance of Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) Pakistan Office Chief Representative KINOSHITA Yasumitsu, Provincial Minister of Punjab for Mines and Minerals Nazar Latif, Commissioner Faisalabad Division Muhammad Shahid Niaz, and Vice chairman WASA Faisalabad Shahid Javed, said a news release.

The Government of Japan and JICA has supported water supply system development in WASA Faisalabad (WASA-F) since 2004 to strengthen urban water service for sustainability.

"The Project for Replacement of Pumping Machinery at Inline Booster Pumping Station and Terminal Reservoir in Faisalabad" accomplished replacement of inefficient transmission pumps with new efficient ones, construction of pumping station, and rehabilitation of reservoirs using 1.616 billion Japanese Yen.

Through these components, reduction of electricity cost and increase of daily maximum water supply will be achieved.

JICA assisted WASA-F to formulate the Master Plan in 2019, targeting next 20 years of future water supplies, sewerage and drainage in Faisalabad, to become first successful water utility in Pakistan as a role model for other water utilities.

"The Project for the Improvement of Water Treatment Plant and Water Distribution System in Faisalabad" has been formulated as a priority project under the Master Plan, aiming not only to increase the water supply capacity for the currently unserved 50,000 inhabitants, but also to expand the output of the pilot projects in the grant project's target area.

The objective of this project is renewing of the Old Jhal Khanuana Water Treatment Plant and rehabilitation of water transmission and distribution facilities thereby contributing to improvement of water supply system in Faisalabad City under this 4.094 billion Japanese Yen grant aid project. JICA is also planning to assist WASA-F through a new technical cooperation project for improving their management capacity.

Through this continuous assistance, WASA-F is expected to enhance water supply service level, improve customer satisfaction, improve tariff revenue, and financial condition of WASA-F for future investment leading further to better services. This "Faisalabad model" would become a replicable model for other cities in the future.

At the signing ceremony, Ambassador WADA stated, "Japan will continue to cooperate with Pakistan in the field of water, including the supply of safe water and the improvement of sewage treatment.

With those efforts, I hope that people of Pakistan will remember Japan not only as the country of rising sun but also as the source of clean water."

KINOSHITA Yasumitsu while speaking at the ceremony said "JICA is expecting WASA Faisalabad to take the leading role in sharing tips and lessons learned from our projects to be utilized for reforming water supply management not only in Faisalabad and Punjab province but throughout the country.

I hope this grant aid project will be successful not only as a single project but as a significant milestone for having a positive impact on the improvement of water supply services in Pakistan in the future. JICA will keep contributing to the sustainable development of water supply sector in Pakistan."

Ambassador WADA and KINOSHITA emphasized the importance of water supply services for Pakistan.

The Government of Japan and JICA will continue to assist water supply services conducted by the Government of Punjab and the Government of Islamic Republic of Pakistan.

China, Pakistan sign MOU on TCM cooperation

BEIJING: A Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) on medical cooperation has been signed between a Chinese education group and a Pakistani university, as per a statement by China's Tang International Education Group.

The MoU, which was signed between Tang International Education Group (TIEG) and Pakistan's Islamia University of Bahawalpur (IUB), aims to boost cooperation in traditional Chinese medicine (TCM) between the two countries, Que Haitao, vice director of overseas operation centre at TIEG, told China Economic Net (CEN) in an interview.

Que noted, the cooperation is partly spurred on by the China-Pakistan Health Corridor. "Cooperation on TCM between the two countries has been ongoing for some time," the vice director said. "We would like to push it forward through education collaboration".

Que said the first step is to collaborate with Pakistani universities to build a China-Pakistan medical centre and cultivate TCM talent at technical, undergraduate and graduate levels.

"More will be done to integrate education with the industry, such as formulating academic and industrial standards for TCM," highlighted the vice director, adding that the group has a team of some 20 international experts to work towards this goal.

Such a tie-up may be a supplement to Pakistan's existing medical education.

"Few universities in Pakistan offer courses on traditional medicine such as TCM. Knowledge about traditional medicine may appear in the course of Pharmacy in some Pakistani medical schools," Prof Dr Yang Zhigang, deputy dean of the School of Pharmacy of Lanzhou University, told CEN in a written interview.

Having conducted a field study of medicinal plants in Pakistan's plant-rich province of Gilgit Baltistan in 2017, Dr Yang told CEN in an interview that Pakistan has thousands of varieties of medicinal plants, and that the country has fallen short on both health-related and economic use of medicinal plants, an integral part of traditional herbal medicine.

"Pakistan only has a preliminary study and application of herbal medicine. A lot of valuable herbal plants are wasted during processing," said Que Haitao. "Working together, we can make better use of such resources and explore more." Looking forward, Que said that TCM education and ensued industrial collaboration in Pakistan will hopefully bring affordable medical services to the local people.

Russia says troops leaving strategic Kherson, Ukraine doubts full pullout

KYIV: Moscow ordered troops to withdraw from near the strategic southern Ukrainian city of Kherson in a major setback as a top US general estimated Russia has suffered more than 100,000 killed or wounded since invading its neighbour in February.

Defence Minister Sergei Shoigu on Wednesday announced Russian forces would retreat from the west bank of the Dnipro River near Kherson in what could be a turning point in the war.

Ukraine reacted with caution, noting some Russian forces remained in Kherson and reinforcements were being sent to the region.

"They are moving out but not as much as would be taking place if it was a full pullout or regrouping," Oleksiy Arestovych, adviser to President Volodymyr Zelenskyy, said in a video posted online on Wednesday night. Russian forces were destroying bridges as they left and mining roads, Arestovych said. "For the moment, we don't know their intentions—will they engage in fighting with us and will they try to hold the city of Kherson? They are moving very slowly," he said.

Kherson city was the only regional capital Russia captured after the invasion and it has been the focus of a Ukrainian counter-offensive. The city controls the only land route to the Crimea peninsula that Russia annexed in 2014 and the mouth of the Dnipro river that bisects Ukraine.

Russian-installed officials have been evacuating tens of thousands of civilians from Kherson in recent weeks.

Turkish President Tayyip Erdogan on Thursday welcomed the announcement of the Russian troop withdrawal in response to a question about prospects of talks between Moscow and Kyiv.

Erdogan has played a vital role as a go-between for Kyiv and Moscow since the start of the conflict, brokering the Black Sea grain deal and assisting in a number of prisoner exchangers — the only diplomatic breakthroughs in the eight-month conflict.

Pakistan regards nuclear safety, security as 'national responsibility': Amb. Aamir Khan

UNITED NATIONS: Pakistan told the UN General Assembly Thursday that it considers as a "national responsibility" the safety and security of its nuclear power plants and research reactors, which are under the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) safeguards.

Speaking in the 193-member Assembly on the annual report of the Vienna-based UN agency, Ambassador Aamir Khan said that Pakistan had developed a comprehensive nuclear safety and security regime based on an extensive legislative and regulatory framework governing the security of nuclear materials, radioactive substances, associated facilities and activities.

That regime, he said, was regularly reviewed and updated in light of the IAEA guidance documents and international best practices, noting that the safety and verification aspects of the Agency's mandate remain its important pillars.

As regards the strengthening of the safeguards system, Aamir Khan, who is the deputy permanent representative of Pakistan to the UN, stresses the need for a balanced approach between the promotional aspects and safety or security related concerns in all of the Agency's functions.

While sharing the view that all States should fully comply with their respective safeguards obligations, he said that the Agency's safeguards should not be used to serve partisan political objectives.

"Its verification regime could remain credible only if it is applied on a non-discriminatory basis, as stipulated in the Agency's Statute," the Pakistani envoy said.

Noting that the old consensus on disarmament and non-proliferation has broken down, Ambassador Aamir Khan proposed convening a special session of the UN General Assembly to evolve a new consensus that responds to the current and emerging realities and offers equal security to all states, large and small.

"This new consensus should eliminate the discrimination and double standards that characterize the present non-proliferation arrangements," he said, adding that it should also evolve an agreed basis for the promotion of the peaceful uses of nuclear energy under appropriate international safeguards.

In his comments, Aamir Khan also said that harnessing nuclear technology is a priority for Pakistan for the pursuit of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

"We view nuclear energy as a reliable, consistent and carbon-free source of electricity generation," he stressed.

Pakistan's efforts to expand nuclear power generation and to increase its share in the national energy mix are driven by the fact that it is not only an energy-deficient country but also one of the most vulnerable countries to the impact of climate change.

"The recent debilitating effects of climate change—which are being felt strongly by my own country in the wake of the recent unprecedented floods—have heightened vulnerabilities of other countries and people around the globe," he said.

The ongoing floods in Pakistan showed the urgent need for global action to curb greenhouse gas emissions, Aamir Khan said. One-third of Pakistan remained under water and 33 million people are in tatters, with losses and damages amounting to a tenth of Pakistan's gross domestic product (GDP).

"Such global issues require global solutions, and close and unrestricted cooperation," the Pakistani envoy said.

"In fact," he added, "access to nuclear power is the need of the hour."

P@SHA Demands Ease of Doing Business

Spokesman Report

ISLAMABAD: Pakistan Software Houses Association (P@SHA) has welcomed the unconditional public support extended by the Federal Minister of Information Technology & Telecommunications (MoITT), Syed Amin Ul Haque, for the IT industry. P@SHA strongly supports the solicitation of facilitative measures from relevant public offices to cooperate with the industry to ensure ease of doing business for IT companies.

The Federal Ministry of Information Technology & Telecommunications (MoITT) and Pakistan Software Export Board (PSEB) have previously strongly advocated to implement conducive policies for the industry and build an organized tech ecosystem in Pakistan. MoITT has made genuine and concerted efforts to garner support for strategic demands for the industry.

However, while MoITT and PSEB have been supportive to the industry, other relevant stakeholders have failed to provide a similar level of support. In an unprecedented move, the federal minister for IT has condemned the public office for the lack of cooperation and support.

According to Zohaib Khan, Chairman P@SHA, "The industry acknowledges the stance of the federal minister for IT regarding the challenges of the IT industry. It is high time that the relevant stakeholders such as the Finance Ministry, FBR, SBP and SECP play their role to facilitate the IT industry. In terms of policy interventions, the industry demands a tax holiday for five years (which was announced till 2025); hassle-free forex retention; 5% cash reward for IT exporters and capacity building through imparting market-driven IT skills for the youth in the broader national interest."

Zohaib Khan added, "While Pakistan grapples with economic crisis, IT & IT-enabled services are the only industry which can potentially stabilize Pakistan's economy. To bridge the current account deficit, the industry offers an increase in IT Exports and the inflow of revenue in the form of investments—both of which are critical to Pakistan's economy."

SYDNEY: The much-anticipated final of the ICC T20 World Cup involving Pakistan and the winners of tonight's India versus England game is likely to be hampered by weather.

According to an advisory by the Australian Government's Bureau of Meteorology, there are high chances of rain on Sunday.

The advisory for Sunday reads "Partly cloudy. Very high (95%) chance of showers. The chance of a thunderstorm, heavy falls possible in the southeast suburbs. Winds north to northeasterly 15 to 20 km/h turning west to northwesterly 15 to 25 km/h during the day."

"Only if the minimum number of overs necessary to constitute a match cannot be bowled on the scheduled day will the match be completed on the reserve day," it says.

However, unlike round matches, in the finals and semi-finals, a minimum of 10 overs are to be bowled to constitute a complete match. If there is no play possible in the final, both finalists will be declared joint winners.
