INDIA prolonged air emergency levels must be addressed immediately

Asim Tanveer

ISLAMABAD: INDIA Prolonged air emergency levels must be addressed immediately

Reacting to the reports of air pollution level in Delhi remaining in "severe" category for over a week as toxic smog blankets the capital city of India, Ann Harrison, Amnesty International's Climate Advisor, said:

"The annual air emergency in Delhi is neither a new problem, nor one that comes without warning. The government's repeated failure to protect people from exposure to hazardous air in Delhi and surrounding areas risk violating their human rights to life and health. The human cost of air pollution needs to be avoided at all costs.

"Climate change and air quality are inextricably linked as the same pollutants that cause climate change harm air quality - putting at risk people's rights to life and to health, as well as the right to a healthy environment. Marginalised populations such as daily-wage labourers and those living in inadequate housing facilities and with reduced access to healthcare services are disproportionately impacted by pollution-related health risks.

"The government of India in collaboration with the respective state governments of Delhi, Uttar Pradesh, Haryana and Punjab need to do much more to effectively operationalize their pollution action plan in order to adequately address such a severe public health crisis - one that endangers people's health and even their lives. "The issue is not limited to India as pollution levels in neighbouring countries are also rising with at least six cities from the sub-continent leading on the most polluted list globally.

"The international community must act and support these countries to safeguard public health and human rights in the entire sub-continent, including by providing adequate finance for mitigation, adaptation and loss and damage from high income countries, especially the G20 and high-income fossil fuel producers, particularly those with the greatest historical responsibility for greenhouse gas emissions which have greater obligations to provide finance."

ISLAMABAD: In the wake of upcoming general elections, the Pakistan Institute of Development Economics (PIDE) has drawn a comparison of manifestoes amongst three mainstream political parties - Pakistan Muslim League Nawaz (PML-N), Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP) and Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI)—that have been front-runners in formulating governments during the last three tenures. The aim was to evaluate if the manifestoes have any substance and concrete plan or are these just comprise hollow promises and sweeping statements, without any homework for the future.

In this regard, PIDE has been proposing reforms in various dimensions for quite a long time. These targeted reform proposals are based on years of research and evidence and are in line with the global best practices. So, PIDE has picked 18 key issues/sectors that it thinks are fundamental. These include: local government, parliament, elections, cabinet, police, bureaucracy, budget making, debt management, PSDP, real estate, agriculture, energy, taxation, tariff, trade, state-owned enterprises (SOEs) and internet. Each indicator has a maximum of 100 score. PPP scored zero in 17 indicators, PTI in 13 and PML-N in 12.

Overall, the three major political parties scored less than 20%, which means that they talk about or have some solid ideas about only 20% of the key economic and policy issues of Pakistan. Further dissecting the figure 20% tells us out of the country's key issues, only 12% of these find space in the PML-N manifesto, 7% in the PPP manifesto and 1.5% in PTI.

This demonstrates that manifestoes don't have any substance at large on key issues of the nation.

This means that political parties don't have any concrete blueprint to work on

if they come into power.

The lack of substance in manifestoes leads to a myopic approach to governance, ad-hocism and serving vested interests only, without any regard for doing something for the long-term development of the country.

For instance, strengthening local government is merely a promise and scored as zero. In contrast, allowing the property tax regime to serve as the primary revenue generator for local government is a concrete point. Thus, this point had been given a 25 score.

How did PIDE arrive at such a score? PIDE summarized its proposals in four points for each theme, having equal weightage for each point i.e. 25%, making it 100% for all four points. It then compared it with what each political party proposes against the same theme. If the manifestoes propose one of the points that PIDE proposes then the score will be 25/100 and if their proposals include all that PIDE proposes, then that manifesto will get full marks i.e. 100/100. It is pertinent to note that, manifestoes are being evaluated on actual reform intervention, not mere promises, slogans and sweeping statements.

Besides, the Institute, in another research product, has also compared if there is any convergence between what is mentioned in manifestoes and the digital narratives by the party leaders. The stark disparity between pre-election promises and the reality of online discourse in the post-election landscape, as unveiled by the Pakistan Institute of Development Economics (PIDE), reveals a critical disconnect. PIDE's analysis reveals a concerning neglect of fundamental issues like economic disparities, infrastructure, unemployment, education, healthcare, governance, corruption, security, environment, and human rights on digital narratives by party leaders, which are pivotal for the country's progress.

Twitter, identified as a significant influencer in shaping political conversations, remains largely underutilized in addressing Pakistan's socio-economic challenges. Leveraging Latent Dirichlet Allocation (LDA) to analyze aforementioned party leaders' tweets from 2018-2022, PIDE found no convergence between the vision chalked out in manifestoes and the propagation or discourse on Twitter.

The comprehensive analysis shed light on a worrying trend in the online discourse of opposition leaders:

PPP and PML-N leadership focused mostly on family legacies and political conflicts

PTI's leader's discussions primarily revolved around Indian-occupied Jammu and Kashmir overshadowing other essential national concerns

This underlines the lack of focus as well as commitment from the country's top political leadership.

PIDE's call for realigning political discourse with manifesto commitments echoes the urgency for leaders to prioritize substantive policy matters for Pakistan's development and prosperity. Manifestoes shouldn't remain as mere paper promises; they should guide the nation's trajectory, providing a clear roadmap for governing parties and feasible policy alternatives for the opposition.

The institute stresses the need to shift conversations from personal grievances, familial legacies and political mudslinging to tangible policy matters, urging leaders to re-center discussions and leverage social media tools like Twitter for more focused, relevant, and policy-based communication, to address the perpetual challenges faced by Pakistan.

Both research products i.e. "Manifestoes without Substance" and "Digital Dialogues vs Paper Promises: Manifesto Alignment" in the form of knowledge briefs can be assessed on the PIDE's website (www.pide.org.pk).

Armed forces' Vow to Protect Motherland - I

Once more, the valiant armed forces of Pakistan have demonstrated unwavering resolve, unyielding commitment, and unflinching determination to eradicate every manifestation of terrorism and extremism from our homeland.

In the pursuit of this noble mission, our fourteen courageous and highly skilled soldiers made the ultimate sacrifice in Parni. Their convoy fell victim to a treacherous ambush by those cowardly and heartless terrorists and extremists who, despite their Pakistani origins, are evidently manipulated and puppeteered by sinister masterminds based not within our borders, but in India, Afghanistan, and possibly beyond.

Yet in another unyielding display of courage and professionalism, our soldiers thwarted a meticulously coordinated terrorist assault, including a suicide attack on Airforce base in Mianwali. The Pakistan Air Force, with remarkable operational readiness, bravery, skill, and expertise, not only repelled the attackers but also safeguarded our invaluable air force assets. In a resolute response to this heinous act, all nine terrorists behind the attack met their deserved fate.

In fact, our valiant armed forces have been proving their mettle since the inception of Pakistan. They liberated a significant portion of Jammu and Kashmir from the oppressive grip of India. Today, the liberated Kashmiris lead lives free from fear, intimidation, abductions, and extrajudicial killings, a stark contrast to the hardships endured by their counterparts in the illegally Indian Occupied Jammu and Kashmir.

The mettle and unwavering professional competence of our armed forces faced yet another formidable test when the Soviet Union, having conquered Afghanistan, loomed on Pakistan's borders, endangering our safety and security in pursuit of warm waters. The USSR was not only defeated but was shattered to pieces.

Our armed forces stood resolute once more as the region transformed into a focal point of international security dynamics, particularly in the aftermath of the tragic events of 9/11. Just as the USSR had previously occupied Afghanistan, this superpower, too, threatened the very essence of our country's safety and security.

Within this intricate web of political and security dynamics, other powers, unfriendly to Pakistan, especially India, seized the opportunity to consolidate its presence in Afghanistan and extend its influence far and wide within Pakistan, employing a combination of kinetic and soft power tactics. The ensuing acts of terrorism martyred our over 70,000 civilians and security personnel and inflicted material losses of over US$ 50 billion.

India, using Afghanistan as a base, especially penetrated deep into Balochistan. It employed an insidious propaganda machine to cultivate toxicity in the minds of the Baloch people, propagating a distorted narrative that falsely portrayed the Pakistani government as an exploitative force and sowed seeds of discord and disillusionment among the Baloch population, instilling the misguided belief that the federal government was plundering the wealth of Balochistan while deliberately stunting the province's development, leaving its people impoverished.

It also lured the disgruntled elements in Balochistan to seek false refuge in Afghanistan by concocting unfounded allegations of persecution and aggression by Pakistan's security forces. Inside Afghanistan, they underwent a process of militarization and indoctrination, and were trained with modern and lethal weaponry.

Consequently, these individuals were reintroduced into Pakistan with clear-cut objectives, which include thwarting and sabotaging Pakistan's endeavors to develop Gwadar as a global maritime trade hub. They aim to impede the construction of an extensive network of educational institutions across the province and hinder the creation of an extensive road and highway infrastructure. Their agenda was to disrupt the provision of affordable electricity, gas, and other utilities, while also working to impede efforts to bolster the agriculture and horticulture sectors in Balochistan. Above all, they sought to obstruct the unlocking of the hidden treasures of Balochistan, with the ultimate goal of undermining the prosperity and affluence of its people. Simultaneously, this elaborate strategy sought to thwart the armed forces' endeavors to integrate Baloch youth into their ranks.

As the adversaries of our beloved nation had been plotting against the very core of our existence, our resolute security apparatus had been quietly pursuing its well-considered strategy.

Operating in a realm of discreet and prudent actions, they were able to turn the tide which finally compelled the coalition members of the foreign forces, one by one, to commence their exit from Afghanistan. They witnessed the Afghan government allies flee the country in haste, followed by a humiliating evacuation by the USA in 2021 and its forces along with all Indian agents who hastily retreated from Afghanistan, leaving behind their physical and human assets.

This staggering humiliation and resounding defeat dealt a severe blow to India's pride, resulting not only in the loss of a safe haven for insurgents targeting Pakistan but also in the depletion of its human assets within our borders.

First BRI conference on sci-tech exchange held in Chongqing, China

The first Belt and Road Conference on Science and Technology Exchange started on Monday, and analysts said China will continue to attach importance to international cooperation on innovation exchanges, and let tech advances benefit more countries and people in the world. Chinese President Xi Jinping sent a congratulatory letter to the conference, which is taking place in Southwest China's Chongqing city from Monday to Tuesday.

Analysts noted that the conference sends a strong signal that China is a major advocate and practitioner of free trade and the country will continue to contribute Chinese wisdom to global sci-tech advances. The first Belt and Road Conference on Science and Technology Exchange will showcase more than 80 instances of cooperation in the sci-tech sector. The conference will focus on inter-governmental tech cooperation, people-to-people exchanges, and industrial innovation and development. This year marks the 10th anniversary of BRI. In the past decade, the mechanism of scientific and tech cooperation has been deepened, exchanges of researchers have been more frequent, and the achievements of scientific and technological cooperation have been increasingly fruitful. Zhang Guangjun, Vice Minister of Science and Technology, said on October 30. "The BRI made significant attainments over the past 10 years and has greatly aroused the enthusiasm of developing countries to join the initiative. As the high-quality development of the BRI enters a new stage, there are growing expectations among BRI partner countries to increase tech cooperation with China in order to boost their own development in smart manufacturing and the digital economy," Song Wei, a professor at the School of International Relations and Diplomacy at the Beijing Foreign Studies University, told the Global Times on Monday. China and BRI partner countries should seize the opportunity to jointly find answers to challenges faced by the world, said Song, noting that China's rise in technology and innovation capability is a prerequisite for promoting technology cooperation with BRI partner countries. Song said that China and BRI partners could increase institutional support for cross-border technology cooperation, such as through setting up innovation bases. As a responsible emerging economy, China is boosting international science and tech cooperation with an open and inclusive attitude, in line with the trend of the times, Bao Jianyun, director of the Center for International Political Economy Studies at Renmin University of China, told the Global Times on Monday. "The BRI is a public platform for the world to enhance cooperation and will provide new opportunities for tech advances," Bao said. China has signed intergovernmental agreements on science and technology cooperation with more than 80 BRI partners, jointly building an all-dimensional, multi-tiered and wide-ranging pattern of tech cooperation, said Zhang. A series of conferences facilitating exchanges in science and technology were held under the framework of the BRI. As one of the latest examples, the Belt and Road International Science Seminar held on October 21 gathered more than 100 representatives of scientific research, education and communication from 11 countries, including Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, the United Arab Emirates, Russia and Romania, according to the Ministry of Science and Technology. Bao said that China's move is in stark contrast to the US-led Western world's "small yard, high fence" approach to wall itself off from global cooperation. The first Belt and Road Conference on Science and Technology Exchange sends a strong signal that China is a major advocate of free trade and will contribute China's wisdom for global science and tech cooperation, Bao said.

Analyzing the Dynamics of Inflation in Pakistan: Causes, Consequences and Policy Implications - IV

Moreover, we will talk about the social consequences of inflation: at first, inflation can exacerbate income inequality. Those with fixed or low incomes, such as pensioners and low-wage workers, may struggle to keep pace with rising prices, while those with assets that appreciate during inflation, like real estate or stocks, may see their wealth increase. Hence, inflation can push more people into poverty, especially if wages do not rise commensurately with rising living costs. Vulnerable populations are often hit the hardest. Most importantly, high inflation can strain public services like education and healthcare, making it more challenging for governments to provide essential services to their citizens.

Ultimately we will see the political consequences due to inflation: the first thing that is most likely to take place is public dissatisfaction which when inflation erodes purchasing power and living standards, can lead to public dissatisfaction and protests. Governments may face increased pressure to address inflationary concerns. Furthermore, managing inflation can be politically challenging. Tough measures to control inflation, such as raising interest rates or reducing government spending, can be unpopular but may be necessary to curb rising prices. Above all, persistent inflation can contribute to macroeconomic instability, affecting the overall economic environment and investor confidence. Understanding these consequences of inflation is crucial for policymakers in Pakistan to implement effective measures that strike a balance between economic growth and price stability. Managing inflation is not only an economic imperative but also a key factor in ensuring social and political stability in the country.

Carrying forward from the last paragraph it is essential to manage inflation and it can be accomplished by effective policymaking as it can manage inflation, maintain economic stability, and enhance the well-being of the population. The most essential policies are the monetary policies for example the State Bank of Pakistan (SBP) should adopt a vigilant monetary policy stance. Utilizing interest rates as a tool to control money supply growth and inflation is imperative. When inflationary pressures emerge, the SBP should consider raising interest rates to reduce borrowing and curb demand, thus mitigating inflation. Effective management of exchange rates is pivotal. The central bank should aim for exchange rate stability to minimize the impact of currency depreciation on imported inflation. Timely intervention in the foreign exchange market may be necessary to achieve this stability.

Fiscal policies are principal as well such as the government should prioritize addressing budget deficits by focusing on revenue generation and adopting prudent fiscal management practices. Reducing the need for borrowing to finance deficits can help contain money supply growth and, consequently, inflation. While subsidies can serve as a short-term measure to alleviate the impact of rising prices on consumers, they should be targeted, efficiently managed, and periodically reviewed to minimize their fiscal burden. Gradual subsidy reform can help ensure fiscal sustainability. With fiscal policies supply-side policies are important too, for instance, infrastructure investment including transportation and logistics, should be a priority.

Who is to enforce the Vagrancy Ordinance 1958?

In Pakistan due to beggars, every citizen is being affected. These professional individuals have adopted begging as a profession, even though there are lawful means for earning a living. Instead of doing labor, if people choose other ways, like begging, there are laws in place to address their misconduct. These laws are in place to discourage people from begging and encourage them to work through legitimate means so that they can become responsible citizens. For beggars, there is the West Pakistan Vagrancy Ordinance, 1958, in place.

Begging is increasing day by day in Pakistan. Professional beggars have even applied for visas from abroad with the intention of begging. Some members of a gang of former beggars have been arrested by the Federal Investigation Agency (FIA). This gang included both men and women.

In the big and small cities and villages of Punjab, there are also people who have taken up begging as a profession, even though laws exist. Despite this, the administration and the police seem to have turned a blind eye. Under the Punjab Vagrancy Ordinance, 1958, cases of begging can be filed.

The power of a police officer to arrest, search, and seize items from vagrants is governed by Section 7, Subsection (1) of this law. According to this subsection, any police officer, without a warrant from a magistrate, can arrest or search a person who appears to be a vagrant and may seize any item in their possession or any other item liable to confiscation under this law.

Sentence for Vagrancy: If it is proven that a person is a vagrant, they can be sentenced to up to 3 years in prison. However, if such a person has not been previously convicted under this law, the magistrate can choose to issue a warning instead of a prison sentence. If the vagrant is a child, a guardian or a personal surety may be taken by the magistrate after instructing that they should not beg anymore.

The West Pakistan Vagrancy Ordinance, 1958, was a piece of legislation enacted in the region of West Pakistan, which later became part of Pakistan. The primary objective of this ordinance was to address the issue of vagrancy, defined as individuals who engaged in activities such as receiving alms in a public place or allowing themselves to be used as an exhibit for the purpose of soliciting or receiving alms.

It also included those who entered private premises without the invitation of the occupier for the purpose of soliciting or receiving alms.

The purpose of the ordinance was to regulate and control such behaviors to maintain public order and ensure the safety and security of private property. Vagrancy ordinances like this were common in various parts of the world as a means to address the challenges posed by individuals who depended on begging for their livelihood or engaged in other disruptive behaviors in public spaces.

The user's statement indicates that, at the time of their last update, the administration had failed to effectively ensure the enforcement of the Vagrancy Ordinance in West Pakistan. The Chief Secretary of Punjab had issued an order, but the provided text does not offer specific details about the nature of the order or its potential impact on the enforcement of the ordinance.

Efforts to address vagrancy ordinances often involve a balance between maintaining public order and the welfare of individuals engaged in such activities. Enforcement and the effectiveness of such measures can be complex and may require ongoing scrutiny and adaptation to address the issue appropriately.

The task of apprehending beggars is squarely placed on the shoulders of the police force, primarily because begging is regarded as a criminal offense in many jurisdictions. In light of this, it becomes the responsibility of the police hierarchy, with the Inspector General of Police (IGP) at the helm, to ensure that their officers take resolute action against beggars.

Professional beggars, who engage in begging as a consistent source of income, often lead a lifestyle that extends beyond what might be expected. These peoples may possess their own homes, vehicles, and maintain bank balances. This financial independence raises concerns about the exploitation of sympathy and generosity in the name of begging.

To address this issue, it becomes imperative to enforce strict measures against professional beggars. By doing so, not only can the criminal act of begging be curtailed, but the underlying factors that contribute to this behavior can also be addressed, such as the need for social support, rehabilitation, or vocational training to transition individuals away from a life of begging. The police play a crucial role in maintaining law and order in society, and addressing vagrancy is an important aspect of that responsibility.

In every market, colony, and road of Multan city, you can see beggar women and men who openly violate the Vagrancy Ordinance. Police officers seem to be preoccupied with their own interests. Regional Police Officer (RPO) of Multan should instruct their Station House Officers (SHOs) to study the Vagrancy Ordinance 1958 within their jurisdiction.

Pakistani scholars hail heroic character of Indonesian envoy

Naveed Ahmad Khan

Education is a powerful catalyst for a nation's development, impacting economic growth, social well-being, and overall progress. Investing in education is essential for building a prosperous and inclusive society as it plays a crucial role in the development of a nation in several ways. It is often considered a cornerstone of social and economic progress. Considering the importance of education and advancing brotherly bilateral relationships with Pakistan, The Republic of Indonesia opted for an inimitable approach by offering fully funded scholarships to Pakistani youth in top-class universities of Indonesia.

Beasiswa Kemitraan Negara Berkembang, popularly known as KNB Scholarship, is a prestigious scholarship program offered by the government of the Republic of Indonesia to selected applicants originating from developing countries managed by the Directorate General of Higher Education, Research and Technology, Ministry of Education, Culture, Research, and Technology. From 97 various countries across the globe, a total of 1,608 students have secured scholarships since 2006. The scholarship is central to supporting Indonesian higher education institutions in their striving for internationalization. The scholarship program is expanding every year by making new partnerships with reputable public and private universities in the country. Amongst the scholarship holders from all over the world, Pakistani students have significant participation. About 300 Pakistani students qualified for Indonesian scholarships after fulfilling the laid down criteria in 2023 for different degree programs of Bachelor, Master, and Ph. D. levels in various top-ranked Indonesian universities. The unique point of Indonesian scholarship is enrollment options in public as well as private sector universities while many other countries including China offer admissions on scholarship only in public sector universities to the students. Indonesian ambassador to Pakistan, H. E. Adam M. Tugio is playing a pivotal role in enabling Pakistani talented students to secure scholarship opportunities to pursue higher education in Indonesia. The scholarship holders of the year 2023 are thankful to the Indonesian envoy for his keen interest, kindness, and support during the application and selection process. The students are enrolled in top-ranked universities in Indonesia which have better rankings than Pakistani universities on the global index. These Pakistani students are from Khyber Pakhtunkhwa (KPK), Interior Punjab, Malakand, and Swat areas. The scholarship includes a 100% tuition fee and stipend coverage. Amongst the many Pakistani students in Indonesia, Mr. Amjad Jabbar Bughio from Dadu, Sindh has secured admission on scholarship in the Bachelor of Digital Business program at Politeknik Piki Ganesha Indonesia University in Bandung city. Mr. Danish Burhan Turk and Sher Gul Bughio from Karachi have secured admission to the Information system program on a fully funded scholarship. Mr. Danish from Islamabad got admission on scholarship to a master's degree program at Telkom University of Indonesia on KNB program 2023. Mr. Osman from Islamabad is enrolled in a master's degree program at the University of ITB in Bandung. Another student Mr. Aqib has completed a master's program on scholarship and currently, he is enrolled in a Ph. D. program on a fully-funded scholarship program in Indonesia. Ms. Saba, Ms. Zunaira Javed from Lahore, and Ms. Sana (mother of two kids) from Multan are young female Pakistani scholars enrolled in various Indonesian universities and availing of fully funded scholarships. They are highly satisfied with the hospitality of host institutes. There are many other Pakistani students in various Indonesian universities with a ratio of 30% females and 70% males. The Indonesian government provides a conducive learning environment to Pakistani scholars. The government of Indonesia, the Ministry of Education, and the Indonesian embassy jointly devised a friendly system for Pakistani students to access any concerned office for assistance. Additionally, the embassy has deputed a liaison officer to keep active contact with Pakistani students and resolve their issues on priority if they arise. The embassy website remains updated with the latest information for students and new applicants who are seeking scholarship opportunities in Indonesia. The government also assists graduates with employment opportunities in Indonesia. They introduced a friendly visa policy for Pakistani scholars and the business community as well while Ambassador Adam M. Tugio personally ensures the provision of quality cum friendly services to Pakistanis. "Bahasa" is an official language of Indonesia and Pakistani students are required to learn the language in their first year of studies at Indonesian universities. Currently, there are no coaching opportunities to learn the Bahasa language within Pakistan to save the study period in Indonesia. Surprisingly, the Pakistani embassy in Jakarta does not even know that how many Pakistani students are enrolled in various universities in Indonesia. Students also complained at multiple forums that the embassy has no empathy to resolve their queries. The embassy staff does not bother to reply to students' emails while the embassy website is also not updated with current information. Pakistani scholars in Indonesia appreciated the heroic character of Ambassador Adam M. Tugio for his exceptional diplomatic services and promotion of education while enabling Pakistani young scholars to secure their admissions through scholarship programs.

Empowering Migrant Workers through the National Skills Passport Initiative

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN (ILO NEWS): To many Pakistani migrant workers, the National Skills Passport initiative will prove to be a gateway to obtain recognition of their skills and ensure decent employment opportunities for returnee migrant workers, participants at a consultative dialogue concluded today in Islamabad. The National Skills Passport provides a comprehensive catalogue of an individual's skills, obtained through formal and informal channels, and provides a migrant worker with documentation of gained qualifications, skills, competencies, and experience in a systematic manner. The National Skills Passport is linked with the Recognition of Prior Learning platform, which formally assesses, certifies, and recognizes the competencies, acquired through informal and unregulated processes. The consultation event was jointly organized by the International Labour Organization (ILO) and Employers Federation of Pakistan (EFP) in Islamabad in collaboration with the Ministry of Overseas Pakistanis and Human Resources Development (MOP&HRD) and was attended by representatives from Government departments, employers' and workers' organizations, and development partners. The National Skills Passport initiative has been supported by the ILO project Governance of Labour Migration in South and Southeast Asia (GOALS), which is generously supported by the Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation. "We are pleased to acknowledge that the Government of Pakistan has taken commendable steps to protect the rights of migrant workers through digital registration, licensing of overseas employment promoters, authentication of foreign employment, grievance redressal mechanisms and welfare programmes for migrant workers and their families," said Geir Tonstol, Country Director of ILO Pakistan. "Skilled labour is in increasing demand, including in the countries that received the largest share of Pakistan's migrant workers. It is important to equip aspiring migrant workers with the right skill sets to meet the demands of the international labour market," he added. Speaking at the occasion, Majyd Aziz, former President of the Employers' Federation of Pakistan stated that the National Skills Passport is not just a card, it is the digital portfolio of an individual to find a decent work opportunity locally and internationally. "We are thankful to the ILO's technical support for piloting innovative approaches in Pakistan including National Skills Passport and South Asia Regional Qualifications Frameworks," he added. "The Government of Pakistan recognizes the increasing demand for skilled human resources in the international labour market and has been focusing on the local and international industry demand-driven skills development programs," said Jawad Sohrab Malik, Special Advisor to the Prime Minister on Labour and Human Resource Development. He further emphasized that the government of Pakistan has launched a digital 24/7 complaint cell called 'Call Sarzameen' to promptly address complaints submitted by overseas Pakistanis. He also mentioned 'Naya Pakistan Calling,' a platform that facilitates the professional Pakistani diaspora in contributing their knowledge and skills towards national development.

UNDP urges swift action and new directions to advance Asia-Pacific's Human Development

The Asia-Pacific region is lurching towards an era of unmet aspirations, worsening inequalities, and a steady erosion of democratic spaces. Rising global tensions, new technologies, growing polarization, and existential threats linked to climate change threaten to disrupt improvements in well-being the region has seen in past decades, says a new report from the United Nations Development Programme. The 2024 Asia-Pacific Human Development Report, launched today, paints a qualified picture of long-term progress, but also persistent disparity and widespread disruption, foreseeing a turbulent development landscape and urgently calling for new directions to boost human development. Titled Making our Future: New Directions for Human Development in Asia and the Pacific, the new report argues that unmet aspirations, heightened human insecurity, and a potentially more turbulent future create an urgent need for change. It warns that the region faces three converging 'risk clusters', ranging from existential threats due to climate change and future pandemics, economic headwinds from shifting globalization patterns and automation, and a flagging pace of reform due to diminishing democratic spaces, rising populism, and polarization. While the region will account for two-thirds of global economic growth this year, income and wealth disparities are worsening, particularly in South Asia, where the wealthiest 10 percent control over half of the total income. More than 185 million people continue to live in extreme poverty - earning below $2.15 a day - a number that is expected to climb higher following the economic shocks of the COVID-19 pandemic, says the report. "The report underscores that to overcome existing challenges, we must prioritize investments in human development, with an understanding that each nation will tailor its own pathways to do so," said Kanni Wignaraja, UN Assistant Secretary-General and UNDP's Regional Director for Asia and the Pacific. "By fostering a people-first policy and smart growth strategies that put a high value on natural assets, we can pave the way for a future that is not only more secure and peaceful but also sustainable and prosperous for many millions more." To bring about that change the Report calls for three new directions in human development: to put people at the heart of development, to recalibrate growth strategies to generate more jobs and respect the environment, and to focus relentlessly on the politics of reform and the science of delivery to turn ideas into practice. It also provides a panoramic view of how in an uncertain future, countries can revitalize development strategies to close existing inequality gaps and reduce human insecurity. A people-centred strategy must start by expanding choice for everyone by, among other things, tackling structural exclusion, upholding human dignity, and building capability. Tackling structural exclusion is not only the 'right thing to do,' it could also produce large economic benefits. Promoting women's equality alone could boost the region's collective annual Gross Domestic Product by $4.5 trillion by 2025, the report says. With external market conditions becoming more competitive, a razor-sharp focus on competitiveness and diversification is essential. The Report highlights new areas of economic opportunity in the low carbon 'green economy' and in technologies, and the region's rich marine resources that can be optimized and sustained through new technology and investment as part of the blue economy, which is especially important for Small Island Developing States. "The call for economic growth should be louder, not quieter, as growth remains essential for human development," said Philip Schellekens, UNDP's Chief Economist for Asia and the Pacific, and the principal author of the Report. "Facing growing headwinds to growth and job creation and the prospect of further disruption, it is time to recalibrate both export-led and domestically oriented growth strategies," he said. The region's large informal workforce—about 1.3 billion people—is being left behind, with many workers trapped in low-quality jobs because the formal sector has failed to offer decent employment opportunities. And the region has seen a steady reversal in democratic practices, to a degree last seen in the late 1970s, the report notes, with the pandemic enabling governments to further tighten restrictions on civil liberties. To chart a new course, governments would need to be future fit to combat the challenges to come. It unpacks how a greater focus on making change happen would be rooted in leadership and governance that is more anticipatory, more adaptable, and more agile. The full report can be accessed at this link: <https://www.undp.org/asia-pacific/rhdr2024> UNDP is the leading United Nations organization fighting to end the injustice of poverty, inequality, and climate change. Working with our broad network of experts and partners in 170 countries, we help nations to build integrated, lasting solutions for people and the planet.

Gohar Ijaz's hard work is paying off: Mian Zahid Hussain

ISLAMABAD: Chairman of National Business Group Pakistan, President Pakistan Businessmen and Intellectuals Forum, and All Karachi Industrial Alliance, and former provincial minister Mian Zahid Hussain said on Monday that the efforts of the caretaker Commerce Minister Gohar Ejaz are paying off and positive results are coming.

The growth in the stock market after several months is welcome, as it has crossed 53500 points, while the prices of essential commodities are also decreasing due to strict control on smuggling by the government, he said.

Mian Zahid Hussain said that after a decline in textile exports in the last 12 months, October has seen an increase of five percent, while exports have seen an overall increase of 14 percent.

Speaking to the business community, the veteran business leader said that foreign remittances have also increased by five percent following the crackdown on illegal dollar trade.

The cotton production is also expected to be 11 million bales, which is double that of last year, but for long-term results, the government will have to get rid of the failed state-owned companies that are losing Rs 1200 billion annually, he said.

Mian Zahid Hussain said that power companies are also losing 1000 billion rupees annually, and the IMF delegation has asked for a fresh report on the losses of government-owned companies.

The business leader said that now is the time to get rid of all these losses and provide relief to the people. He said that apart from general inflation, house and shop rents are also rising faster than people's income, which needs to be regulated.

Traders doing business in rental shops and millions living in rented houses are worried about rising rents. The income of the businessmen and people is continuously decreasing, but the expenses and rents are continuously increasing, which has taken away their peace of mind.

In order to improve the situation, an effective and efficient system of rent control should be introduced in the country.

There is a need for reforms in the power sector, a push for import substitution, and to increase in the share of solar power and wind power in the energy basket while reforming the agricultural sector and corporate farming. The import of palm oil should be reduced through sunflower production, he said.

Zaka Ashraf dispels rumours of rift in Pakistan team

A Sports

BAHAWALPUR: The Pakistan Cricket Board (PCB) Management Committee Chairman Zaka Ashraf opened up on the alleged rift within the Pakistan men's cricket team.

Speaking to the media here on Monday, the PCB head cleared the air on the ongoing controversy regarding the national team, who are participating in the ICC World Cup 2023.

Zaka Ashraf categorically denied any rift within the players and blamed "cricket enemies" for spreading the false rumours. "There is no infighting in the team," said Ashraf. "The whole team is united. These baseless stories are created by the enemies of the game."

For the unversed, it was reported in late September that Babar Azam and Shaheen Afridi got into an argument when the captain expressed his disappointment with the senior players in the dressing room, after losing the deciding Super Four clash of the Asia Cup to Sri Lanka, which led to their elimination from the continental event.

Reports also suggested that things got pretty tense between Babar and Shaheen after the heated argument before wicketkeeper Mohammad Rizwan intervened to bring the situation back under control.

Later, the ace pacer Shaheen took to his Instagram account in the evening, sharing a picture with Babar. He captioned the solo picture from a chess game with "Family".

Babar, who was in Dubai, then flew down to Karachi to attend Shaheen and Ansha Afridi's wedding reception in the metropolis.

It appeared that all was well among Green Shirts but their series of losses in the ICC World Cup 2023 reignited the rumours of a rift, especially among the three frontmen of the national cricket team – Babar, Shaheen and Rizwan.

Meanwhile, Zaka Ashraf then extended well wishes for the national team's ICC World Cup 2023 campaign.

Pakistan players to partake in one league apart from PSL, hints Zaka Ashraf

A Sports

BAHAWALPUR: Pakistan Cricket Board (PCB) head Zaka Ashraf on Monday hinted that Pakistan cricketers will be allowed to play only one franchise league apart from Pakistan Super League (PSL).

Talking to journalists here, the PCB head acknowledged that Pakistan cricketers were preferring to play franchise leagues across the world as "they were relatively underpaid".

"Our cricketers get very little money," Zaka Ashraf regretted, noting that the PCB was considering to raise payments so that they delightfully sign central contracts.

Earlier, the PCB announced central contracts, first time for a three-year period, with a significant increase in monthly retainers as well as match fees for all four categories.

As many as 25 cricketers will be offered a momentous deal that will include a portion of ICC revenue. Unlike last year, red-ball and white-ball national contracts have been merged.

The list of players will be divided into four categories with significant increases in monthly retainers. Revenue from ICC will be incorporated in overall monthly remuneration.

Category A (3 players): 202 %
Category B (6): 144 %
Category C (2): 135 %
Category D (14): 127 %

Players' match fees will also see a major hike: 50% increment in Test, 25% in ODI and 12.5% in T20I. Centrally contracted players who are playing domestic cricket will be paid 50% of the international match fee.

Zaka Ashraf – while talking to journalists – pointed out that there was a proposal that the Pakistani cricketers will be allowed to play only one league apart from the Pakistan Super League (PSL).

Responding to a question, Ashraf said that he had invited former chief selector Inzamam-ul-Haq for a meeting but he resigned from the post before it.

The former cricketer stepped down last month from his post after "conflict of interest" allegations.

He also addressed a controversy surrounding a phone call of Pakistan skipper Babar Azam, saying that he had no conversation with the batter.

Ashraf also expressed best wishes for Babar Azam, saying that he held a telephonic conversation with the skipper following the victory against New Zealand.

Appreciating the players, he said that the Pakistani opens up a great show in the previous match of the World Cup 2023 against New Zealand. "I talked to the skipper and announced Rs1 million reward for Fakhar Zaman," he added.

When asked whether Babar would be removed as Pakistan captain if the team fails to qualify for the semi-final spot, Ashraf said the decision will not be made solely as the Cricket Technical Committee (CTC) is there to deliberate on the issue.

Bangladesh knock Sri Lanka out of ICC World Cup 2023

DELHI: Najmul Hossain Shanto and Shakib Al Hasan scored half-centuries after a combined bowling effort to power Bangladesh to a sensational three-wicket victory over Sri Lanka in the 38th match of the ICC World Cup 2023.

Bangladesh's three-wicket victory marked the end of Sri Lanka's semi-final hopes. Set to chase 280, Bangladesh scored 282 for the loss of seven wickets and 53 balls to spare, thanks to a massive 169-run partnership between Shanto and Shakib.

Earlier, Bangladesh opens Tanzid Hasan and Litton Das failed to give a steady start to the pursuit as they both perished within seven overs with just 41 runs on the board.

Shakib Al Hasan then joined Najmul Hossain Shanto at the crease and the pair launched an astounding recovery with both scoring half-centuries.

The duo appeared to have settled down and were looking in control before Angelo Mathews removed both set batters in quick succession to cause a stir in the run chase.

Shakib scored a brisk 82 in 65 deliveries, laced with 12 boundaries and two sixes while Shanto smashed 12 boundaries on his way to a 101-ball 90 and top-scored for the side.

Mahmudullah (22) and Mushfiqur Rahim (10) then stitched a brief 38-run partnership for the fifth wicket before both perished in quick succession while Mehidy Hasan Miraz (3) also followed their footsteps.

Bangladesh, as a result, slipped to 269/7 in the 41st over and still needed 11 runs.

Fowhid Hridoy, however, held his nerves calm and steered his side over the line with an unbeaten 15 off seven deliveries while Tanzim Hasan Shakib aided him with five not out.

Dilshan Madushanka led the bowling attack for Sri Lanka with three wickets while Angelo Mathews and Maheesh Theekshana bagged two each.

Bangladesh drew first blood after opting to bowl, as Sri Lanka lost Kusal Perera on the last ball of their first over with only five runs on the board.

Sri Lanka's skipper Kusal Mendis then joined Pathum Nissanka and together they knitted a 61-run partnership, dominated by the latter before Bangladesh struck in back-to-back overs to leave the Islanders reeling at 72-3.

Mendis was dismissed by his Bangladeshi counterpart Shakib Al Hasan after his cautious 30-ball 19, while, Nissanka was castled by Tanzim Hasan Sakib in the next over.

Nissanka played a quick knock of 41 runs from 36 balls with the help of eight boundaries.

Sadeera Samarawickrama and Charith Asalanka then added 63 runs for the fourth wicket before the former was out while attempting to hit Shakib Al Hasan out of the park after scoring 41 off 42.

With Sri Lanka stranded at 135-4, former captain Angelo Mathews came out to bat, however, he found himself in an unfortunate situation as he became the first batter to be given 'timed-out' in international cricket.

Charith Asalanka took charge and attacked Bangladesh bowlers, getting reasonable support from Dhananjaya de Silva (34) and Maheesh Theekshana (22).

De Silva added 78 runs with Asalanka during their sixth-wicket stand while Theekshana helped add 45 runs.

Asalanka completed his second ODI century in the 48th over before getting out in the next over. His gusty 108, featured six boundaries and five sixes.

Bangladesh bowlers picked up the final two wickets for a mere run, with Tanzim Hasan Sakib topping the bowling charts with three wickets.

China's CIIE a big booster for int'l trade, investment, says Malaysian business leader

KUALA LUMPUR, (XINHUA): The China International Import Expo (CIIE) provides an important platform for other countries to promote their products and services, which can boost international trade, attract more investment and bring opportunities for economic partners, a Malaysian business leader said.

The sixth CIIE, scheduled to be held on Nov. 5-10 in the eastern Chinese city of Shanghai, signifies the event's first full return to in-person exhibitions since the outbreak of COVID-19.

Low Kian Chuan, president of the Associated Chinese Chambers of Commerce and Industry of Malaysia (ACCCIM), told Xinhua in a recent interview that this year is the sixth consecutive year that ACCCIM has organized Malaysian companies to participate in the CIIE. According to Low, Malaysian exhibitors will bring their food and agricultural products and consumer goods, including fruits, beverages, snacks, and cosmetics, to the CIIE.

"China has entered a new era of more diversified and personalized food consumption demands. There is an increasing demand from Chinese consumers for high-quality, natural and organic foods, and Malaysia has a wealth of agricultural and food resources such as frozen durian, bird's nest, coffee and more to meet the needs of the Chinese market," he said.

In his view, CIIE is not only a chance to bring Malaysian products to Chinese consumers, but also a platform for entrepreneurs to meet potential partners from various countries, brainstorm innovation ideas and promote international cooperation in the food industry.

Low noted that the CIIE has set up an innovation incubation zone to invite global startups and partner institutions to bring the latest technologies to the exhibition, adding that "this highlights that CIIE attaches great importance to scientific and technological innovation, and the organizer's determination to help overseas small innovative projects enter China market."

"The size of China's market is huge, offering many growth opportunities for companies from other countries. By participating in the CIIE, international companies can gain easier access to the Chinese market, while China can also establish more trade partners with various countries," he said.
